A CARD.

Mr. JAMES H. RAINFORD, under whose Stage Management the most attractive of the dramatic novelties which have been placed before the public have been produced, is about to migrate from the STAGE to the BAR, he having taken the Cambridge Club Hotel. But some of Mr. Rainford's friends have resolved that he shall not quit the scenes of his labours without some recognition of the energy, zeal, talent, and gentlemanly conduct which he has displayed upon the boards. They have decided that the best form in which to express their appreciation of the "ACTOR, STAGE MANAGER, AND MAN," is attained by giving him a COMPLIMENTARY BENEFIT in that sphere wherein he has so long contributed to the public amusement, and which he now quits with regret.

Signed:—John Bennett, J. L. Hall, Bland Holt, H. H. Vincent, H. N. Douglas, H. W. Emmett, H. Jerdan, W. St. Laurence, J. Tolano, E. Mowry, G. Dillon, S. Whyte, H. Hodson, O. Fisher, A. NEW SOUTH WALES PARLIAMENT.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

FRIDAY, MAY 28.

The SPEAKER took the chair at half-past 4 o'clock.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply to Mr. Melville, stated that part of the amount voted in 1879 for immigration was expended to cover advances made in London in 1878, and the balance to cover advances made in 1879. The final payment from the vote of 1879 was made on the 8th of January 1880: 5731 immigrants arrived in 1879, and 1200 immigrants had arrived this year.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply to Mr. J. Davies, for Dr. Renwick, said that no decision had been arrived at in regard to the petition from residents of the eastern suburbs, presented to the Colonial Secretary on the 21st April last, praying that 66 acres of land at Nelson's Bay, known as Bronte, be purchased for the purposes of a public reserve.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply to Mr. Dangar, said that prior to the passing of the Public Instruction Act the average attendance at the Narrabri Public school was 94, for which number sufficient accommodation was provided. Since that time the attendance was reported by the teacher to have risen to 126. Steps would at once be taken to ascertain what further accommodation was now necessary.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply to Mr. Macintosh, said that the amount appropriated for the Volunteer Force for the year 1879 was £38,170, for 1792 officers, non-commissioned officers, and men. This amount did not include the votes for the Public School Cadet Corps, £550; Rifle Association, £500; and gratuities to widows of Volunteers, £187. The amount paid to members of the Force for 1879 was £19,423 16s. 9d. A special allowance had been granted, which in a few cases was in excess of the annual rates of pay, in order to secure the attendance of Volunteers on certain special ceremonial occasions, and at the same time to avoid interference with the regular instruction drills. A balance of £16,009 10s. 9d. of the amount appropriated for 1879 remained unused.

Mr. SUTTOR, in reply to Mr. Cohen, said that a man named Sparks was fined three amounts of £10 each, on the 31st December last, for illegally driving the cattle of one Donald Campbell. Sparks was now in the debtors' prison for the non-payment of the costs of the other side, and had been since the 7th November last, and the amount endorsed under the writ of attachment was £66 11s. 8d. It was impossible to say how long Sparks would remain incarcerated.

Mr. BAKER informed Mr. Dangar that the report as to the cancellation of portions of Bingera gold-field reserve was forwarded to the Lands Department some time since, with a recommendation that a portion of the reserve from sale be thrown open to conditional purchase. The land recommended to be withdrawn from the reserve, No. 381, was about 4200 acres, situated chiefly on the north side of the Gwydir River, and near the town.

PAPERS.

Sir HENRY PARKES laid on the table the report of the Inspector of Public Charities; report of the Government Analyst on certain deleterious ingredients in the manufacture of sweetmeats and hair dyes; return of immigrants who arrived in 1879.

It was ordered that the documents be printed.

EVIDENCE UNDER THE GREAT SEAL.

Mr. WISDOM moved for leave to bring in a bill to regulate the taking of evidence by Commissioners under the Great Seal.

Leave was granted.

PUBLIC ROADS ACT AMENDMENT BILL.

Mr. PILCHER moved the second reading of the bill, and pointed out that the Public Roads Act, 4 William IV., No. 11, empowered the Government to open and alter roads, the only notice necessarily given to the owner of the land being through the Government Gazette, which was not seen by one person in 10,000. Again, under the third section, people had only forty days allowed them to protest or apply for compensation. He proposed that sixty days notice should be given before the powers conferred by the Act were exercised, and that the notice served should be a personal notice, and that was really the whole scope of the bill.

Mr. BAKER explained that the practice for years past had been that notice was published in a local paper as well as in the Gazette, and in addition to this the surveyor was on the land in the first instance, and this was in reality a notice, as well as a preliminary notice which was published in the Gazette, notifying the intention of the Government to resume the land. The bill before them provided that personal notice should be given to the proprietor, but it did not state how he was to be found. But another clause in the bill would give persons who had neglected to take advantage of the forty days' notice to come in and claim compensation from the Government, and this, he thought, was not a correct position to place them in. The Government were in such a position that they could not support the bill.

Mr. GREENWOOD said that this attempt exceeded anything he had ever heard of in the way of retrospective legislation. (Hear, hear.) It would make illegal anything that had been done by the Government in connection with this branch of administration. It dealt in a piecemeal and patchwork way with a great question that would have to be dealt with in a comprehensive way. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. FARNELL said that he quite agreed with the principle of this bill, but this was not the way to deal with a question of this kind. It should be dealt with by the Government in a comprehensive bill, and he would vote against the second reading, because it only dealt with a special feature of a general question. (Hear, hear.) He hoped his hon. friend would withdraw the bill.

Mr. BUCHANAN thought the bill was being subjected to very harsh treatment. The law at present permitted a man's property to be invaded for the purpose of a road being made through it, and he might lose his chance of obtaining compensation because he had not had reasonable notice given to him of the intention to make the road. The object of Mr. Pilcher was that the owners of land should have personal notice served upon them. While they waited for a comprehensive measure, owners might be having their property invaded without their knowledge, and the time for them to obtain redress might elapse before they could take advantage of it. This was a most important piece of legislation. He objected to the retrospective clause, if there were one in the bill, but he thought the bill might be permitted to pass, and that in committee it could be made to attain the object desired by the mover.

Mr. BADGERY would vote against the second reading of the bill, because it did not go far enough to be of much service to the country, and because numerous small bills on the same subject created a great deal of confusion. It would be wise of the hon. gentleman to withdraw the bill.

Mr. PILCHER: Well, I won't do it.

Mr. BADGERY: And bring in a more comprehensive one.

Mr. S. C. BROWN moved an amendment to the effect that the debate be adjourned for a week. The bill might act retrospectively, and therefore should be carefully considered.

The amendment was affirmed.

ELECTORAL BILL.

Mr. WATSON moved that this bill be read a third time.

Mr. BUCHANAN said that when the bill was introduced he approved of it in the main, but it had been so altered now in two particulars that he considered it his only duty to vote against it as sincerely as he had previously warmly and actively supported and espoused it. The first aspect of it was so hideous and monstrous that he would not be true to his past life or the democratic institutions of the country—treacherous to all that the liberals of this country had done—if he did not stamp with his utmost detestation the clause he desired to refer to. He hoped from the depths of his soul that his vote would lead others to join him, so that the bill might be destroyed in toto. He stood against the principle of exacting a tax from those who stood up as representatives of the people—people desirous of doing their best for the country they lived in, and hon. members would therefore see how anxious was his desire that the bill might be extinguished on its third reading. He would sooner see the bill swept away altogether than that it should pass with that clause. He knew it would preclude some of the greatest men in the country from dreaming to offer themselves as candidates for seats in this House. He knew it would bring forward a larger amount of wealthy ignorance. There were in this and all young countries men of marked ability and integrity who could not at a given moment put down £40. This money qualification was the most pitiful and wretched of all qualifications that could be enacted. If any qualification was enacted why not that of education? You could respect that. But this money qualification could only be despised. He believed that the people of the country would be so indignant that they would rise up and show their feeling at the ballot box. He trusted that they would not allow such an insult to rest on the past history of the colony. Very few of those who had voted in favour of this provision were men who had taken any part in the struggle for political liberties in days gone by, and he hoped the constituencies would make an example of those who had voted for this £40 provision. [Mr. SHEPHERD: You voted for it last night.] Whoever said that said what was false. Rather than vote for a detestable abomination of that kind he would have wrung his own neck. (Laughter.) Last night he voted for the adoption of the report to prevent the discussion lasting a month on the schedules. Was it not better that he should select the third reading for his opposition. No one had been stronger in his denunciation of this feature of the bill than he had been. Another provision which almost equalled this in atrocity was that which he maintained would practically disfranchise him. It would compel him to give a vote for a certain class of men whom he abominated and detested. It would happen that almost every honest man would be disfranchised. How was it possible that the constituencies could be so circumstanced that he could vote for four men. There might be one that he would give his heart's blood to see sitting in Parliament, but he would be precluded from voting for him without voting for three others that he hated. Such a provision was worthy of the Assembly that invented a money qualification. He could not imagine such a thing, except as the conception of some small pettyfogging mind, utterly unworthy of a place in the parliamentary history of the colony. Was this Parliament so bereft of reason as to compel him or any man to vote for certain individuals—a thing that should be as free as the winds of heaven. A ranker injustice was never conceived—a more pitiful trick was never invented—for what purpose he could not imagine. Each of these provisions would be a sufficient cause to persuade him to oppose the third reading of the bill; but when both were combined his conviction of the necessity of doing this was irresistible.

Dr. BOWKER said he would be sorry to throw any obstructions in the way of the bill, but he should be sorry to let such a clause as the 35th clause pass without recording his protest against it. This clause was revolutionary, and forced the voter against his will, to do that which he did not approve of. The arguments in support of it seemed to him of very little account. It was the Catholics on the one side, and the Wesleyan Methodists on the other. In his opinion it was neither a Catholic nor a Wesleyan Methodist question—it was a question of general interest. This system would result in the return of men whom nobody cared about at the head of the poll, and majorities would be practically unrepresented. If this clause was carried into law, as sure as could be it would have to be repealed.

Captain ONSLOW said he was not present when Mr. Garrett's clause was passed, or he would have voted against it. He had voted for the £40 clause of Mr. S. C. Brown, but he would have voted against it if he had known that the clause of Mr. Garrett was to be proposed. He thought some amendment ought to be made in their standing orders, to prevent any such radical alterations being made in a bill without notice. Under this system the majority only would rule, and the minority would not even be heard. The object of representation was that all parties should be represented. Our present system of representation was nothing more than the representation of minorities—and that in the worst form. He should like to see the bill re-committed, but he would not vote against the third reading.

Mr. GARRETT denied that he had ever said that minorities should not be heard. As for the hardship of minorities not being represented there, how was it with the minorities in single-seat constituencies? A remark had been made about the tyrannical nature of the provision, as it was said that it compelled a person to vote for people he disapproved of. It did nothing of the kind, only compelling him to vote for the four best men. His hon. colleague had been guilty of interfering with a man in the way he should vote, supporting a new clause in 1874, enacting that a man should only vote for one man at the same election. This was a direct denial of rights, whereas this proposition only compelled a man to exercise his full rights. He had no doubt that when this had been in operation one election the hon. member for Mudgee would be found supporting it. The hon. member also referred to what he called the tyrannical character of the clauses imposing the £40 deposit, but if he had remained at his place that clause would never have been carried, but he went away, and he had no right to complain of the legislation which was enacted in his absence. He was quite prepared to take the responsibility of this clause, and contended that it would do much to prevent personation, as it would be a difficult matter to suborn persons to vote in favour of four candidates. With reference to the suddenness of the proposal, he might say that they were sometimes compelled to make amendments suddenly. He was prepared to discuss the question for a month, and felt convinced that if it was done there would not be ten members of the House vote against the proposal.

Mr. PILCHER would support the third reading of the bill, but he did not subscribe to every principle of the measure. He did not subscribe altogether to the amendment of the hon. member for Camden, and did not agree with his contention that it would prevent corruption, as it was just as easy to bribe a man to vote for four as for one. Supposing that there were three candidates for a constituency returning two members, he might have a great regard for one candidate and a supreme contempt for the other two, and yet he would be compelled to vote for one of the latter. He thought that an infringement of the liberty of the subject. He supported the £40 clause, and for that reason he would support the third reading, because he did not wish to have the bill ripped up again.

Mr. O'CONNOR said that this debate revealed this fact, that if there was a full House there would be a majority that would secure the elimination of these obnoxious clauses. It was another proof that the minority ruled in that House. He denied that the clause which Mr. Garrett had had passed would have the effect of stopping plumping in the way indicated. He (Mr. O'Connor) contended that minorities had a right to a legitimate share of representation. He was not the representative of a minority or of a sect, but was one of the representatives of West Sydney, and he scorned Mr. Greenwood's insinuation that he was the nominee of the Pope or of Archbishop Vaughan. They found that the greatest men at home advocated the representation of minorities, but here they were to be wiped out altogether. Minorities were often the salvation of the country. The best measures passed here had emanated from the minorities. He protested against the cruel wrong done by this clause, but it would recoil upon its authors. He had some evidence of collusion between the Colonial Secretary and Mr. Garrett in reference to this clause. The manner in which the clause had been brought in showed that the movers did not believe in its validity. This provision was most tyrannical, and of a retrogressive character. When he used the word "secularist" in the debate last night, he used the word entirely in a political sense. The conduct of the Government was worthy of them, in attempting to blot out all opposition. He hoped this portion of the bill would receive fair consideration in that desirable Upper House, and he thought this matter was a sufficient argument in favour of a second Chamber. He would not oppose the third reading of the bill, but he felt it his duty to express his views as he had done.

Mr. MELVILLE could not allow this bill to pass without entering his protest. The bill as introduced by the Government did not contain much that was objectionable. He, however, objected to the clause introduced by the hon. member for Newtown, which, in his opinion, had inflicted a grievous wrong upon the democratic institutions of the country, as it was in conflict with the principle of manhood suffrage. He had been surprised that the Government did not consent to recommit the bill for the purpose of excising this obnoxious clause, more particularly as it was objected to by the members of the Government, who had voted against it on each occasion. He believed the hon. member for Newtown was perfectly sincere in his belief that this was the best means of remedying an acknowledged evil, but he considered that hon. member was mistaken. With reference to the 35th clause, he did not think that any one could forecast the result of that proposal; he feared that it would have the effect of placing outsiders at the top of the poll, and hence he opposed it, and would vote against the third reading of the bill, although with very great regret.

The motion for the third reading was carried on the following division:—

AYES, 34.

The bill was then read a third time, passed, and an order was made that it be sent to the Legislative Council with the usual message.

The House adjourned at twenty minutes past 8 till Wednesday next.

In the debate in the Legislative Assembly on Thursday, on the motion for the adoption of the report of the Committee of the Whole on the Electoral Bill, Mr. O'Connor, in speaking against the motion, used the word "secularists" in reference to the supporters of Dr. Renwick at the recent East Sydney election. For this he was taken to task by Mr. Greenwood, and Mr. O'Connor subsequently explained that he had used the word entirely in a political sense, and that he fully recognised the fact that many men who voted against the denominational interest were men of the purest lives and most religious principles. This explanation of Mr. O'Connor was inadvertently omitted from our report. In the division on Thursday night on Mr. Brown's £40 clause, in the division list the name of Dr. Renwick is inserted in the place of Mr. Bennett by mistake.

DEPUTATIONS.

THE CHINESE QUESTION.

Yesterday morning a deputation, consisting of Messrs. J. B. Douglas, B. Row, J. Millikin, F. Braidwood, and J. Josephson, and representing a public meeting held in the Guild Hall on the 5th instant, waited upon the Colonial Secretary, to present a memorial in favour of prohibiting Chinese coming to the colony.

Mr. DOUGLAS read the document, which set forth that the Chinese were not desirable colonists nor traders; that their habits were antagonistic to those of Europeans, and that great antipathies existed between the two races; also that the presence of the Chinese race obstructed the social progress of Europeans, that the Chinese were not amenable to the governmental authorities, but only to their own, while their numbers were increasing so rapidly that they would be able soon to defy the law; that unless the introduction were shortly checked they would absorb all the means by which Europeans derived a livelihood; that the sanctuaries of the colony were reeking with their abomination, to alleviate which nothing had been done, and that it would have been better for the colony to have remained a convict settlement than for it to become a sink of Chinese depravity.

Mr. DOUGLAS said that since the last time he waited upon the Colonial Secretary on this question nothing had been done to mitigate the evils attending the introduction of Chinese into the colony. The evils were increasing, and the Chinese were arriving here at the rate of 400 a month. This was a terrible state of things and the Chinese were to be seen everywhere to the extent of 1 in every ten of the European population. They came, and still were coming. The public had been led to infer that something would be done this session by the Legislature mitigating the evils. The Colonial Secretary had stated that they might have confidence in him to endeavour to preserve New South Wales as a British colony, but as things were going now it would not be a British colony many years hence. The palatial building the deputation were in might be in the occupation of the Chinese race a hundred years hence, and their escutcheons occupying a place over its portals. They would have Chinese electors, Chinese representatives, and Chinese Ministers. The only hope was that, as their presence became absolutely intolerable, some sharp remedy would be applied. At present they were absorbing every industry, and why not, if they were permitted to come? But why let them come? A vast deal of good might, he considered, have been done by the measure of the Government which had been unfortunately lost in the Council. They inferred now from what the Colonial Secretary had said, and what the Attorney-General had said at Morpeth, that another measure would be brought forward, and he would like to ascertain if this were going to be done this session. They had the intimation that a private member would do something between this and the end of time, but he considered that it was only to the Government they could look for an amelioration of the evils the people were complaining of. A great many difficulties, it was alleged, stood in the way of legislation on this subject, but he believed they were principally imaginary. Many of the evils had their origin in the cupidity of people inclining them to engage cheap Chinese labour. It was only by means of legislation they could anticipate a cure. If constitutional government did not rescue the country what were the people to do? Despair? They were on the point of desperation now, and their rulers would become responsible for the results. It was said that the colony was bound by Imperial enactments, but he knew of nothing in the treaty between England and China preventing the people here legislating in their own interests. Besides treaties might be abrogated if they interfered with the necessary conditions of a State. Several nations had proved this, and had turned foreigners away from their ports. And if the people here had not sovereign rights of their own to preserve why was the power given to them to legislate for themselves. It would be a terrible misfortune to alienate Englishmen from Englishmen, but this he feared would take place if something were not done to prevent it. The difficulties America was experiencing in connection with the Chinese labour question were enormous. The Americans were stupid enough to permit the evils to accumulate, and the people here with the example of America before them would be more stupid if they permitted themselves to be ruined from the same causes. Anything that the people outside could do to prevent the accumulation of similar evils here would be like battling with the winds. It was to the Legislature they must look. In the time of Sir George Gipps, in 1842, the Imperial Government decided that the introduction of aliens would be detrimental to the interests of the colonists. Yet now there was responsible government in the colony the introduction was permitted to go on. The evils at present were in bounds, and could be cured if suitable precautions were taken, but if allowed to increase much more they would not be curable, even by legislation. He hoped that the colonies would take combined action on the subject now.

Mr. ROW also supported the memorial; and said that he had received a letter from America, saying that the Chinese were coming here in shoals. The Chinese would live where Europeans would starve. He had a friend at Botany who had six, and who said that it only cost 3s. 6d. a week each to keep them.

Sir HENRY PARKES: Why does your friend keep them?

Mr. ROW blamed his friend for doing so. He would not like to live on such an amount. Perhaps the introduction of Chinese would not affect him, but he had a large number of grandchildren he was desirous to have placed in a position for earning a reasonable subsistence, and he feared this could not be done if more Chinese were allowed to land.

Mr. BRAIDWOOD said he had travelled pretty well all over the world, but had not seen any colony benefited by the introduction of Chinese into it; and here the Chinese had been the means of throwing a large number of persons out of employment.

Mr. MILLIKIN and Mr. JOSEPHSON also addressed the Minister in support of the memorial.

Sir HENRY PARKES said he had listened to the statements the deputation had made, and he sympathised with much that had been said. The evils attending the introduction of large numbers of Chinese into the colony were very great, and might lead to consequences which even far-seeing men did not clearly foresee just now; but the applying of a remedy to them was more difficult than appeared to be considered by the persons the deputation represented. It was very easy to see the mischiefs, and to look straight to the exclusion of the Chinese to remedy them, but nothing in such a direct way as that could be done. Nothing could be effected in such a matter without having in view their relations with other countries. England, of all countries in the world, had been the pioneer in insisting upon the free intercourse of nations; and it must be borne in mind that, far above the mere letter of treaties, the object of England was to force an entry into China for Englishmen. This was the policy of England, and it was accompanied by a measure extremely difficult to defend—compelling the Chinese to receive the opium of England. This having been the policy of England—to open free intercourse with all people—the people here could not act without recognizing it. The difficulty in the case of China was that she stood by herself. She had a population which no other nation possessed, and it seemed that there was nothing amiss to them if they went the right way to accomplish it. Some things the deputation or the memorial expressed he could not agree to. They were not borne out by history or fact. For instance, it was no use to say that the Chinese were a semi-savage race, when they possessed one of the oldest forms of civilization in the world, although to a great extent it was a mystery to Europeans. He had never joined with those who only saw the vices of the worst class of Chinese, and who, measuring the nation from those vices, regarded the Chinese as one of the most inferior races. He considered them a very intelligent people, and it was because he did this he apprehended that great difficulties would arise from their coming here. It was said that the first Napoleon expressed himself to the effect that if they learned the art of shipbuilding, they would be able to conquer the world. Certainly if they adopted the habits of the English they would be able to accomplish wonders, for to attain any object it set its mind to the nation could afford to lose tens of thousands, hundreds of thousands, millions of lives. It would be extremely powerful; and although most Englishmen would laugh at the idea of the Chinese becoming masters of this country, it was not beyond the range of possibility that they would create a very troublesome influence here. He could not forget that the effort the Government made to meet the difficulty did not have the sympathy of the people be presumed the deputation represented. The measure the Government introduced he believed would have had a salutary effect, and if it had not been sufficient others could have been resorted to. He thought a meeting of the public petitioned the Council to reject it—not a very encouraging thing to do, considering that it had the almost unanimous approval of the people's representatives. He thought consequences might follow that might be disastrous to European civilization here. One remark from the deputation he concurred in—that whatever was done now ought to be done in union with all the colonies. He would open communications with all the other Australian Governments, to ascertain what they thought on the subject. That was the only definite promise he could make; but he could assure the deputation that the whole question should be dealt with in the way most consistent with all the conflicting interests involved in it. He could not promise to introduce a measure this session, for members and Ministers were almost worn out. He did not think there could be 100 Chinamen a week coming here. Such a proposition could not extend over a very long period, and the statement that they numbered 1 in 10 of the population was, to his mind extravagant. At that rate 80,000 out of the 800,000 of population would be Chinese, and he did not believe they had 5000 in the colony. They would soon ascertain the proportion to a man, however, for the census was about to be taken.

Mr. DOUGLAS proceeded to state that the advance of civilization amongst barbarians was justifiable, and that unless their representatives protected their sovereign interests the people might take it into their head to sever the gordian knot existing between the United Kingdom and the colonies, when

Sir HENRY PARKES interjected: "I would not advise them to try it."

The deputation then thanked the hon. gentleman, and withdrew.

CONNECTION OF THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY WITH SYDNEY.

Messrs. Cohen, Charles, H. H. Brown, Badgery, and Fawcett, Ms.L.A., Mr. J. G. Chalmers (Mayor of East Maitland), and Messrs. J. M. Brunker and J. H. Heaton waited upon the Minister for Works, yesterday, for the purpose of presenting a number of petitions from residents in the Maitland district, setting forth that, in the construction of a line of railway which will connect the Great Northern railway with Sydney, the route already surveyed and forming a junction with the Great Northern line at Maitland presented no engineering difficulties of much greater magnitude than will be presented by any other route, and would, in point of distance, bear favourable comparison; while a very extensive district would be opened up, a large population served, and a very considerable amount of traffic obtained. It was therefore urged that the junction of the lines should be at Maitland, or as near thereto as possible.

Mr. LACKEY promised to give full weight to the representations of the deputation, but said that he had not yet received from the Engineer-in-Chief any recommendation for any particular route. He said he was glad that the plan adopted by the members of this deputation had not been to urge the claims for some particular locality for local reasons, but they were desirous that the junction should take place at such a point on the Great Northern line as would best serve the interests of the greatest number of people in the district. He hoped that before long the Engineer-in-chief would be able to recommend the Government to adopt some suitable route, when it would be the duty of the Government to urge on the works as rapidly as possible. He was afraid, however, that the present session would be too short for the preparation of a scheme to be submitted to Parliament, in which this work would be included, but he would promise that no avoidable delay would take place.

THE SUGAR-GROWERS ON THE RICHMOND.

Yesterday, Mr. J. M. Purves waited on the Hon. E. A. Baker, Minister for Mines, to ask for the construction of a road to connect the farms of the sugar-growers on the Richmond River with a sugar-mill. It was proposed by the Government surveyor that the road should take a rather circuitous course in consequence of a creek that intervened, and which, if crossed, would require the erection of a costly bridge. The people of the district asked that a direct road might be made, so that they might carry their produce to the mill quickly and cheaply. Mr. Baker, in reply, stated that the matter should have the consideration of the Government, and he would let Mr. Purves know the result as soon as a determination was arrived at.

THE AUSTRALIAN MUSEUM.

A deputation, consisting of Dr. Cox, Professor Liversidge, Dr. A. Roberts, Mr. Robert Hunt, Mr. Patrick Mackay, and Mr. W. J. Powell (acting-secretary), waited on the Hon. Minister for Education yesterday, to ask for an increased endowment for the Australian Museum. The members of the deputation pointed out that the only source of revenue they had to depend upon was the annual vote of Parliament, but that vote had not been increased since the time the institution was confined to the small old building in William-street. They had now greater part of the fine new structure in College-street in use, in addition to the old building, but their funds were quite inadequate to keep the place properly in order and to deal with the numerous specimens they were constantly receiving. Under these circumstances they thought they had a fair claim upon the Government for an increased endowment, in order that they might make the Museum a great educational institution, as it ought to be.

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON told the deputation that their application was too late for the present session, as the estimate for the Museum had been passed. The session was now rapidly drawing to a close; but in all probability there would be another session very shortly, in which he would be able to introduce a supplementary estimate. He would recommend them to draw up a statement showing what their present position was, and what they required in order to make the institution what they desired it to be. He had no doubt that, if their demands were not too extravagant, the Parliament would be willing to grant what was requisite.

The deputation undertook to carry out the suggestion of the Minister, and, having thanked him for the reception he had given them, they withdrew.

COMPLIMENTARY BANQUET TO CAPTAIN CHISHOLM.

Last night, at the Masonic Hall, a complimentary banquet was given to Captain H. J. Chisholm, by the Highland Society of New South Wales, when occasion was taken to present that gentleman with a handsome silver tea and coffee service, in recognition of the esteem in which he is held, both as a citizen and an active member of the society. The chair was occupied by Sir John Hay, K.C.M.G., President of the Legislative Council; and the vice-chair by the Hon. Alexander Campbell, M.L.C. Full justice having been done to an excellent repast,

The CHAIRMAN proposed the toast of "The Queen," which was received in a right loyal manner.

The VICE-CHAIRMAN, in proposing the toast of "The Governor," said that since his arrival in the colony his Excellency had at all times shown an ardent desire to do everything in his power towards the material progress and advancement of the colony. (Hear, hear.)

Alderman J. GRAHAM gave "The Parliament."

The CHAIRMAN, in responding, said that having been for upwards of twenty-three years a member of either branch of the Legislature without intermission, he felt proud in holding the position which he at present occupied. No doubt the Parliament had its shortcomings, but they must recollect that they were those who were responsible for any shortcomings, because if they did their duty at the hustings by their own votes, as well as by their personal influence, they would do a great deal to increase the efficiency of the Parliament. It would not be long before they would again have an opportunity of exercising an influence in their choice of representatives in Parliament, and he trusted they were all sensible of the great responsibilities which would devolve upon them when that time came, and that at all events there would be no deterioration in the quality of Parliament; but, on the contrary, he hoped that the new Parliament would be better than the existing one.

The Hon. A. CAMPBELL also responded.

The CHAIRMAN, in proposing the toast of "Our Guest," said that he had great pleasure in being present that evening for the purpose of handing to Captain Chisholm the testimonial he was about to present to that gentleman, as an evidence of the valuable services he had rendered in connexion with the Highland Brigade and Highland Society of New South Wales. For a number of years past Captain Chisholm had been ever foremost in contributing to the pleasures of their countrymen in this colony by means of innocent recreation. It must have been as far back as 1868 when the Highland Brigade was first instituted, and ever since that time Captain Chisholm had been the heart and soul of that society. (Hear, hear.) He had the greater pleasure in being present that evening when he remembered that their guest by inheritance deserved something of the country, as well as by his own exertions. (Hear, hear.) Many of those present would doubtless recollect the eminent services rendered to this colony by that eminent lady, Mrs. Chisholm, the mother of Captain Chisholm. It was well known how enthusiastically that lady laboured in the cause of promoting the better class of immigration to this colony. (Hear, hear.) They knew how she spared no trouble, and at the risk of her health, which finally broke down, in caring for the interest and welfare of those young women whom she persuaded to come out to this colony to make this their future home. Hers was no immigration scheme which ended when they landed on these shores; her endeavour was to follow them up, and show them that they were not without friends when they arrived here, who would assist them in every possible way to establish themselves in this their new home. He hoped it would be long before the character and services of that estimable lady would be forgotten, and while they had her son amongst them, who had shown that he inherited the same spirit of kindliness and philanthropy, he trusted they would take the opportunity of showing how much they valued the memory of Mrs. Chisholm as well as the services of her son. (Cheers.) He had much pleasure in presenting Captain Chisholm with the handsome testimonial before him.

The presentation consisted of an elegant silver tea and coffee service, very tastefully chased, the inscription upon the centrepiece being as follows:—"Presented to Captain H. J. Chisholm by the officers and members of the Highland Society of New South Wales in recognition of his services in promoting the national music and games of Scotland."

Captain CHISHOLM, who was enthusiastically received, returned thanks in a feeling manner for the complimentary manner in which he had been alluded to by the chairman, and also for the high tribute paid to the memory of his deceased mother.

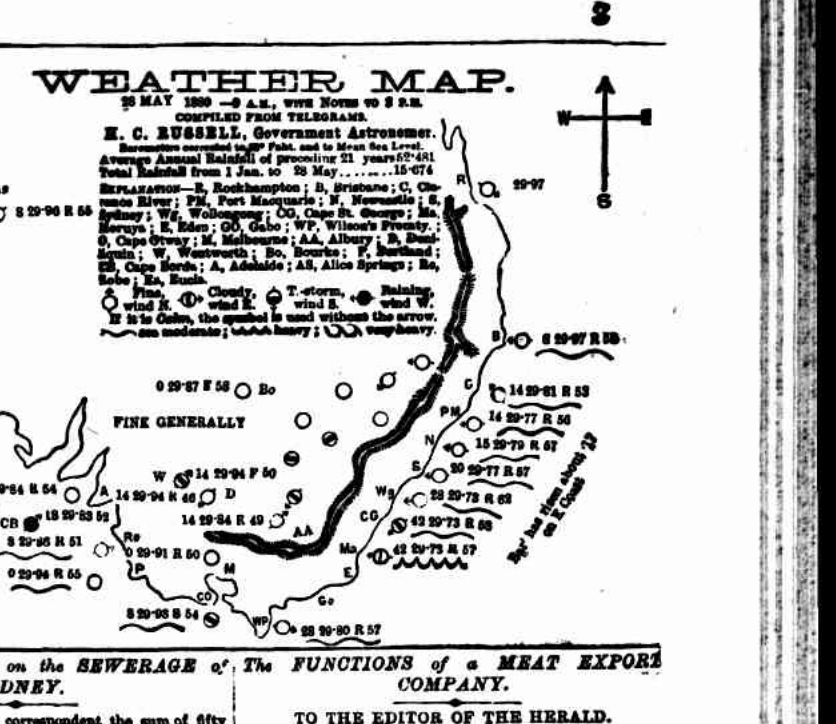

The Hon. ALEX. CAMPBELL, in a humorous speech, proposed "The Land o' Cakes," which was responded to by Mr. A. Kethel, J.P., in his usual pleasant style.

The toast of "The Highland Society" was given by Mr. J. Grant, of New Zealand, and responded to by the chairman and other gentlemen connected with the society.

The remainder of the evening was devoted to the singing of national songs and melodies.

IMPORTANT LEGAL DECISION IN FRANCE.—An important decision has been given by the Paris Civil Tribunal in a question of special importance to foreign residents. It had generally been supposed that the French tribunals were incompetent to try suits between aliens unless their jurisdiction is accepted by both parties. That rule appears to admit of exceptions, according to a judgment just given on a point of law in a suit brought by Mr. Howlett, a jobmaster, to recover a sum of 900 francs from Mrs. Lethbridge, one of his customers. The lady is married, but is not living with her husband, and is ignorant of his present domicile, and neither Mr. Howlett nor Mrs. Lethbridge had obtained formal authorization to reside in France. The defendant in consequence pleaded that the French Court was incompetent. The tribunal, in summing up, said,—"The authorization of the Government is not a necessary condition for a foreigner to fix his domicile in France; it is only a means of securing without contestation the exercise of civil rights derived from a residence in the country. No law prevents a foreigner from fixing his residence in France without authorization, or from acquiring and preserving a de facto domicile, which involves certain effects, although they are less extended than those specified in Art. 13 of the Civil Code:—'The foreigner who shall have been admitted by the authorization of the king to establish his domicile in France enjoys all civil rights so long as he resides in the country.' If that right cannot be exercised by him against a foreigner in an equal degree, on the other hand it cannot be refused him without evident injustice when the adverse party does not appear to have any other domicile than France, and resides here habitually, and the obligations have been contracted and executed in France. In the present case it is for the defendant to prove that her domicile is not France, and she cannot by vague allegations trifle with the plaintiff, and place him in the impossibility of obtaining justice. The tribunal therefore declared that the case was within its jurisdiction, and ordered it to be pleaded in a future sitting."

PRIZE for ESSAY on the SEWERAGE of SYDNEY.

We have received from a correspondent the sum of fifty guineas as the nucleus of a subscription to be devoted to this object, and we have been requested to act as treasurers of the fund. We shall be prepared to receive subscriptions. It will be remembered that the Mayor of Melbourne is offering a prize of £200 for the best scheme for the sewerage of Melbourne, and it is believed that the simultaneous offer of liberal sums in the two colonies will elicit the best scientific and engineering talent in the world. The following are proposed by our correspondent as the terms of the competition:—

1. That the date (1st October, 1880) fixed by the Mayor of Melbourne be also adopted as the return day for the Sydney essays, which must be sent in to the Herald office anonymously, in the usual way.

2. That the essays consist of written descriptions of the schemes proposed, demonstrated by plans or (preferably) by working models.

3. The judges will be named by a committee of subscribers.

4. To save duplicating plans or models, which may be applicable for both prizes, the Mayor of Melbourne will be invited to make it a sufficient compliance with the terms of his advertisement if the plans, &c., in both cases be exhibited by the 1st October in the Exhibition building at Melbourne.

DISCOVERY of the BARRINGTON GOLD-FIELD.

The following is the report of the select committee of the Legislative Assembly, appointed on the 11th November, 1879, to inquire into and report upon the claims for a reward for the discovery of the Barrington Gold-field:—

"1. Your committee, having examined the witnesses named in the list, whose evidence is hereto appended, are of opinion that the following facts have been proved:—(1.) That on the 14th of July, 1875, the Government, by notice in the Gazette, offered certain rewards for the discovery of new gold-fields, which covered twelve months in advance of that date; and on the 1st of August, 1876, a similar offer of rewards was gazetted, extending to 1st of August, 1877. (See appendices A1 and A2.) (2.) That Messrs. Saxby, Brothers, commenced prospecting on what is now known as the Barrington or Copeland Gold-fields on or about the 1st of March, 1876, and continued their explorations until after the 8th of August following, on which date they reported to the Minister of Mines the discovery of a payable goldfield, at which time there were no gold-workings nearer than Nowendoc, about fifty miles distant, other than that caused by the discovery of Messrs. Saxby, Brothers. (3.) That Messrs. Saxby, Brothers, are the only parties entitled to any consideration from the Government. (4.) That the Gazette notices above referred to do not fix any time for reporting such discoveries other than 'within twelve months.' (5.) That the evidence does not disclose any attempt on the part of Messrs. Saxby, Brothers to prevent their discovery being made known to the public.

"2. Your committee, therefore, beg to recommend their claim to the favourable consideration of the Government.

"HENRY COPELAND, Chairman."

THE NEW LICENSING BILL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Dr. Johnson has left on record that there is nothing which has yet been contrived by which so much happiness is produced as by a good tavern or inn, and, though the words were written in the last century, I will venture to assert that there are those inside and outside the walls of our Houses of Parliament who will not hesitate to endorse the philosopher's opinion. Unfortunately for the people, and more especially the travelling community, of New South Wales, no encouragement has been afforded by the Government of the country for the establishment of inns, taverns, or hotels which would be the pride of the licensee, and a credit to the community; on the contrary, it has been the policy of each successive Government, and of those who administer the law, to multiply public-houses in every direction, and grant licenses to many worthless persons, doubtless for the sake of the fee, and then, by Customs tariff and other enactments, to grind as much money from their victims, rightly or wrongly, as could be devised by legalized means.

Upwards of nine years ago—9th March, 1871—by the Statute 34 Vic. No. 21, the duty on English ale was increased from 3d. to 6d. per gallon, or say 12s. 6d. per hogshead, and since then various schemes have been proposed to still further hamper the publicans through the operation of the Custom-house. This 12s. 6d. per hogshead comes directly from their pockets, inasmuch as they cannot with any degree of reason raise the price of a glass of ale to their customers on such a pretence. Nevertheless, this additional duty of 12s. 6d. per hogshead on English ale has been a loss of £30 to me annually—at the lowest computation—since the law came into operation, and to others, of course, according to the extent of their business.

In December last an increased imposition of 2s. per gallon on all descriptions of spirits was legalized, and in such a manner as smacked of despotism, and this erratic change in our fiscal policy entailed upon me another loss of £200 per annum. This is no exaggeration; and, what is worse, the extra cash must be paid to the Commissioner of Customs before the goods can be removed from the bonded stores.

The latest device for the further extinction of respectable hotelkeepers is contained in the 43rd clause of Sir Henry Parkes' Licensing Bill, which is now undergoing the deliberation of Parliament. This measure proposes to increase the annual licensing fees for first-class premises from £30 to £75, which means an additional handicap on my business of £45 annually.

Thus within the last nine years this boa-constrictor process has culminated in swelling my outlay by a sum of £275 beyond what was just and reasonable. I have no correlative advantage, but, on the contrary, it is well known that this policy on the part of the Government is neither more nor less—whether intentionally or otherwise—than an engine to harass respectable traders, and a bonus to the unscrupulous grog-blender, the illicit distiller, and the wary smuggler.

By hard and honest industry I have been enabled to make a respectable connection, to increase my hotel accommodation, and to render my premises comfortable in all respects; and now, after an outlay of a considerable amount of money in alterations and furniture, changing the place from a third to a first-class hotel, I am threatened with an additional imposition of £45 annually. Is this the way to encourage any citizen to keep his hotel as it ought to be—well-ordered and comfortable?

It is not the fault of respectable licensed victuallers—there is a fair percentage of the class in the business—that houses of ill-fame have existed in this city, and were conducted by or with the connivance of licensed persons. Inspector Anderson and other members of the police force have rendered yeoman service to society in their day in eradicating these "plague spots" from amongst us. Defective as are the existing laws, they were sufficient to close the doors of such dens as were open at all hours to those creatures of both sexes who pollute the city. These haunts or places of assignation existed for years, and it is only recently that they were closed; and now it is a moot-point whether the magistrates who granted licenses to such persons are not a greater nuisance to society than those who were their protégés.

Certainly, the bill before Parliament contains many excellent clauses, and will be hailed with satisfaction by the reputable portion of hotelkeepers; but, on the other hand, there are several objectionable elements in the measure, which, if allowed to become law, would inflict gross injustice upon all honourable persons in the business, and degrade their occupation most unwarrantably. The Parliament should approach this measure impartially—they have a stern and solemn duty to perform—and whilst endeavouring to eradicate existing evils, they would not overdo their mission by inflicting a great injustice on the large number of fair-dealing men who can be found in the ranks of the licensed victuallers of New South Wales.

Yours, &c., R. A. W.

An important religious difficulty has arisen in connection with the general elections in Great Britain which affects one class of voters in the whole of the constituencies. It appears that according to the rule of their religion, the Jews cannot join in the election work on the Seventh Day of the Passover. That day falls on the Friday in Easter week, when the elections will be in full swing, but if the polling should be fixed for this day in any constituency, the Jews will be unable to record their votes. There is no provision to meet the difficulty in the clauses of the Ballot Act.

The FUNCTIONS of a MEAT EXPORT COMPANY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—As the establishment of an export trade in meat from Sydney is a matter of the very highest importance, not only to our stockowners and citizens, but to all classes in the colony, you will perhaps allow me space in your columns to discuss at some length the conditions on which a company ought to be formed for the establishment of this trade, and that, too, although I should to some extent, go over the same ground as that so ably taken by the Hon. Mr. Brown and your correspondent, "Grazier," in support of the proposal that the directors should be allowed to purchase and ship meat without referring to the shareholders.

If this power be withheld the real commercial element is taken from the company, and it is very questionable if all the shares would be subscribed for, as they would then have to be, by our stockowners. But, supposing for a moment that they were all taken up under the prospectus as it stands, it would be quite impossible to initiate the trade unless the directors be empowered to buy and ship; for there is not one stockowner in a hundred who either could or would ship his own stock until the business is properly established. To show this we will suppose that the company has been duly formed; that it has leased a commodious and suitable store in London provided with cold appliances, to which the meat can be conveyed from the ship on its arrival, and kept till sold to best advantage; that it has erected a large freezing house with extensive store at Sydney, connected with the railway, and having a frontage to the harbour, capable of containing say, 1500 bodies of beef, or the equivalent in sheep,—from which the meat can either be shipped direct into the ocean-going steamers, or conveyed on board in properly constructed lighters; that it has erected killing and chilling houses, each capable of containing, say, 600 bodies of beef at Wagga Wagga and Dubbo. It will take 24 hours at least to cool and set the meat, and in that way there would be always two lots at least chilling at the same time, and that the company offers to slaughter and chill the meat, put it on the railway trucks, take delivery at Sydney, freeze, and ship it, and again unload and store it in London, for owners at fair and reasonable rates of remuneration for these several services. Supposing, I say, that all this is done; can any one believe that our owners would ship their own stock, be at all the expense here mentioned, pay freight and charges for keeping the meat frozen on the voyage, and not only not be able to draw against their shipments, but also run the risk of their arriving in bad order? It is not for a moment to be supposed that they would do anything of the sort, until the business is thoroughly established; and it is simply nonsense under the circumstances to talk, as some of them do, of shipping a very perishable article like meat, without obtaining an advance, as they do their wool, which is non-perishable. Instead of this, I feel sure that they will almost to a man, when they have given the matter due consideration, be well content to sell to the company, and thus get a fair share of the difference between the present miserable rates obtained in the Sydney and other markets and that which the meat will realise in London.

Moreover, if the trade is to be established it must be conducted in such a way as that the "Orient" and other companies, who go to the expense of fitting up their vessels for carrying the meat, can depend upon receiving full freights; and any one can see that if the business is to be carried on as it would be at first at least, in a fitful way by individual owners, the necessary guarantee could not be given to these companies.

Then, again, as noticed by Mr. Brown, it is most essential that the meat should be of the very best quality; and there would be no certainty as to this, if the business is to be carried on by individual owners; while, as he also points out, certain portions of the carcase should be exported, and the rest tinned, salted, or otherwise dealt with here, which could not be done unless the business was in the hands of a company.

Some of those who are opposed to the directors being allowed to purchase have noticed the objections here pointed at, and argue that they might be obviated by the company making advances to owners who shipped their own meat. That, however, would be making the company do a banking business, and incur liabilities beyond its means; for the capital left after purchasing land, erecting the necessary premises, and procuring the cooling machinery and other plant, would be too small to admit of advancing to an extent sufficient to establish the trade. Besides, this would remove only one of the objections I have noticed. All the others would still exist, and would, I am afraid, lead to the failure of the undertaking.

On the other hand, if a strong company were formed, and the directors empowered to buy and export meat, it would, as its existence depends upon the way in which the business is conducted, purchase only the very best stock and meat (which it will be able to do by the pound) carry out all the details of preparing it for shipment in the most approved manner, and be able to ship enough, without asking the Banks for advances, to establish the trade. This would give Banking and Insurance companies' confidence, and when it did the shareholders could at any time, if they thought fit, withdraw the power of purchasing from the directors and allow stockowners to ship on their own account. Shortly stated, the objects of the company should be—(1) to provide suitable accommodation at the principal centres of the stock traffic on our railways for receiving and slaughtering cattle and sheep; (2) to make provision for the reception and chilling or freezing meat and other produce at these centres, and for their transmission by rail to Sydney; (3) to provide commodious stores on the water frontage at the port and prepare the produce for export by chilling, freezing, or otherwise; (4) to provide cold storage at the port to which the produce is shipped; and (5) until the trade is established, and afterwards, whenever the markets present favourable opportunities, to purchase and ship on the company's own account.

It is deeply to be regretted that there should be any difference of opinion on this point. Nothing of the sort has occurred in Melbourne, and I would earnestly advise those gentlemen in the provisional management, who have taken so strong a stand against the directors being allowed to purchase, to at once withdraw their opposition; for, although they themselves may be prepared to ship on their own account, it will be seen from what has been said that stockowners, as a rule, will not do so, and that it would not be to the good of the trade that they attempted it. These gentlemen should also bear in mind how exceedingly urgent it is that an outlet should at once be obtained for our surplus meat, add accept this or any other practicable scheme, although it should not tally in every respect with their own views. No doubt the time will come—and we will all be glad to see it—when owners will be able to ship or sell here as they think best; but the thing now is to obtain immediate relief. That will soonest be brought about by the formation of this company, and that again will soonest be effected by framing the prospectus on a true commercial basis.

I trust, Sir, that you will take this view, and lend us your all-powerful aid in a matter of such vital importance to the whole colony, but especially to Sydney.

I would suggest, therefore, that the provisional directors should take an early opportunity of calling the promoters together again, and submitting the necessary alteration in the prospectus prior to the allotment of the shares.

A MEMBER OF THE EXPORT COMMITTEE.

P.S.—A newspaper correspondent, signing himself "Stockowner," is one of those who are misleading their fellow owners on this question. He says that as the Orient company is fitting up its steamers for carrying frozen meat, no Australian company is required, and that when the steamers come out the squatter can at once ship his meat as he now does his wool. The fact is the Orient steamers will not take a single body of meat on board in an unfrozen state. The machinery on these vessels has sufficient power to keep a large quantity of meat frozen, but could not freeze a shipment except in such small parcels as would keep them a month in port. Then again how is the meat to be brought from the interior to the seaboard in the summer time except it be chilled and set (i.e. charged with cold) prior to its being put into the trucks, and a regular supply kept up for the steamers? And how are these chilling houses to be erected unless by such a company as that contemplated? The greatest novice knows that cooling can not be done on a small or imperfect scale, except at a cost which makes the use of artificial cold all but prohibitory. Ice made at the rate of 1 ton per day costs some 28s. per ton, while that made at the rate of 20 tons costs less than 5s. Writers such as "Stockowner," who have not taken the trouble to study the subject, are only playing into the hands of those who are doing all they can (and the vested interests are both strong and active) to prevent the establishment of an export meat trade.

It is generally believed that some compound of carbon exists in comets.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

Friday Evening.

There was a great decline in Stock and Share market business to-day. No Bank shares changed hands, and few of any other kind. City Bank had buyers at 11¼, sellers at 11¾; Commercial fully paid, salable at 96½, held for 97, new issue wanted at 72, offered at 74; Joint Stock have been steady for some days at 15 buyers, 15½ sellers; Mercantile firm, 5¾ refused, 6 asked; New South Wales a shade weaker, 50½ offered, sellers at 50¾; New Zealand salable at 19½, held for 20; Queensland National for sale at 7, sellers at 7½; Union wanted at 60¾, holders asked 62. Australasian Steam firmer, 17 declined, 17¾ required; Clarence and Richmond have had no buyers for some time; Hunter River could be sold at 7 if there were any in the market; buyers of Illawarra at 5½, sellers at 5¾; North Shore Ferry continue firm at 15s. buyers, 16s. sellers. Insurance shares had very little alteration: Australian fire were not quoted; General still very scarce, buyers of City at 1s., sellers at 1s. 2d.; Mercantile held for 1s. 7d.; New South Wales easier, 60s. was the best offer, 61s. 6d. asked; Pacific sold and were salable at 60s., offered at 61s.; Sydney Fire not asked for, sellers at 60s.; Sydney Marine for sale at 84s., wanted at 82s.; buyers of United at 37s., sellers at 40s.; Gaslight unchanged, 12¾ obtainable for fully paid, 13 wanted; new issue had buyers at 4¾, sellers at 5. Pyrmont Bridge offered at 7. Shale and Oil strong at 10s. 6d. buyers, 12s. asked. Volunteer Land orders in demand at 91, held for 92. No sellers of Bulli Coal; Wallsend steady, buyers at 13½, sellers at 14½; Waratah for sale at 8¼, business could have been done at 8; Vale of Clwydd held for 16s. 6d. Great Cobar weaker; 48s. 6d. would have been accepted, 47s. was the best offer. Buyers of Krohmann's Gold advanced their price to 4s. 9d. buyers, 5s. 3d. sellers; Star of Peace had a revival, as the result of the news of richer stone being struck, and a number changed hands at 3s., 3s. 9d., 4s., 4s. 6d., and 5s., closing with sellers at the latter; Band and Albion stronger, 5¾ refused, 6½ wanted; Hustler's pups had buyers at 4s. 6d., sellers at 7s.; New North Clunes for sale at 8. We cannot report any transactions in Debentures, the market being bare of those salable, except City of Sydney sixes, for which 101 was the best offer, and 103 was required.

The Import markets show signs of improvement; and although being so near the end of the month operates against business being done, there have been some good lines reported as having changed hands. A demand for candles has sprung up; we heard of the quittance of 1000 boxes D. R. J. at 7¾d., and another line of that brand and one of Gouda at the same figure. There is no improvement to notice in breadstuffs; flour has a steady sale at £10 to £11 10s. Adelaide wheat is held at 4s. 8d. to 4s. 9d. Maize had a decline; best lots sold at 2s. 2d. to 2s. 3d., ordinary samples 2s. to 2s. 1d. In Dundee goods there was some inquiry for woolpacks; a parcel of full weights placed at 3s. 6d., and light at 3s. 4d.; cornsacks, unchanged. Fish has a slow sale; second brands of half sardines offering at a reduction on late rates; 1-lb. salmon steady at 7s. 9d. to 8s.; plantation coffee is moving at 12½d.; hops are firm at 1s. 8d. to 1s. 10d. for new Tasmanian, but only salable in limited quantities. There is a steady inquiry for liquors; further sales of Martell's and Hennessy's bulk brandy reported at 10s. 3d. to 10s. 6d.; a parcel of 50 quarters and 800 cases Dunville's whisky changed hands to arrive at equal to late rates. Queensland rum is very firm, 2s. 2d. paid for a line of 40 hogsheads. 500 cases medium geneva sold on terms reserved. The Press cablegram received about a fortnight ago regarding the fall in iron has interfered with purchases, as buyers expected that a like reduction would be made here, but did not take into account the fact that this market did not advance similarly to that in England. Sheet lead sold to-day at £20, or about what it would cost on board in London. Sugars are better than late auction rates would infer. Sales of Mauritius sorts are on a moderate scale. The first of the colonial crop may be looked for next month. Buyers of coarse Liverpool salt are operating freely to arrive. The local produce markets are still devoid of any great activity. At the Darling Harbour sales this morning the supply was very small, as was the attendance, and competition was slack. The prices obtained in one or two lines were higher than the corresponding quotations of last market, but in such cases this was accountable for by the superior quality of the produce, and not by any improvement in the attitude of the market. No oaten hay in trusses was to hand, and bundle and bale hay were both scarce. Values for prime samples ranged from 5s. 3d. to 5s. 10d., but only one or two parcels realized the higher rates. Medium qualities brought from 4s. 3d. to 4s. 10d. Wheaten hay, in bundles, was worth from 3s. 6d. to 4s. 9d.; and oaten and wheaten mixed bales brought about the same figures. Chaff was much neglected. Really good samples did not attain higher than 5s.; and medium and inferior sold at from 3s. 6d. upwards. Straw was also very dull, and did not bring higher than 2s. 9d. in any case. Only one truck of lucerne hay was forward, and it was disposed of at 3s. 9d. Pumpkins sold at from 1s. 8d. to 2s. 1d. per dozen. Maize (bags included) was worth from 2s. to 2s. 3d. per bushel.

The sales of hides and tallow, held by Mr. Bridge, Messrs. Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Mr. Barker, Messrs. Maiden, Hill, and Clark, and Messrs. Mort and Co. passed off without any noticeable change in prices. The supply of hides, though small, was sufficient, as the demand, except for prime lots, was not active. Tallow of all kinds sold well, and maintained late quotations. Calfskins and yearlings, if good, brought full rates, the former selling at 1s. to 4s. 6d., the latter at 2s. to 8s. 3d.; goat, 6d. to 1s.; kangaroo, 3d. to 14d. Horsehides were rather scarce. Beeswax, 9½d. to 11d.

Messrs. Richardson and Wrench report the sale of the Canmaroo station, in the Maranoa district, Queensland, together with 16,500 sheep, and also all stores, horses, working plant, and all other belongings, for £8800, Messrs. Skinner and Waddell being the purchasers.

Messrs. William Sloane and Co. report the following sales on account of Mr. C. Rolleston:—The Glendarrwill run, Queensland, with 70 head of horses, plant, &c., to Mr. Enoch Cobcroft; also, 6000 ewes, Albinia Downs station, to Messrs. Travers and Gibson, at 6s. per head.

Messrs. Fraser and Co.'s boot and shoe sale has been postponed until Monday.

A branch of the Joint Stock Bank has been opened at Lithgow.

The shareholders of the Newcastle Steamship Company held their usual half-yearly meeting to-day, at Newcastle; Mr. Alexander Brown, chairman of the board of directors, presided. The report was unanimously adopted. A dividend of 10 per cent. per annum was declared, and £1800 carried to insurance fund. The propriety of purchasing a new first-class steamer was discussed, and eventually it was agreed unanimously to increase the capital of the company by £30,000, to provide for the purchase of a suitable vessel. Mr. J. R. Bingle was elected a director.

The Customs duties received to-day were as follows:—

Spirits, £1829 5s. 9d.; wine (still), £42 8s. 2d.; wines (sparkling), £51; ale, porter, and beer (in bottle), £12 1s. 2d.; tobacco and snuff, £9; unmanufactured tobacco, £202 14s.; cigars, £115 19s. 10d.; tea, £135 2s. 3d.; coffee and chicory, £8 16s. 3d.; sugar (unrefined), £395; opium, £24 11s. 3d.; rice, £15; dried fruits, £60 2s. 8d.; specific duty, £244 0s. 9d.; pilotage, £22 7s., 4d.; harbour and light dues, £17 0s. 8d.: total, £2684 10s. 1d.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

SATURDAY, MAY 29, 1880.

In the Legislative Assembly, yesterday,

Ministers answered questions put by Mr. Melville, Dr. Renwick, Mr. Macintosh, Mr. Cohen, and Mr. Dangar respecting the votes and expenditure for immigration, the petition for the purchase of Bronte, at Nelson's Bay, the sums appropriated for the Volunteer Force for 1879; the case of John Sparks who was brought before the Casino Bench on or about the 27th January, 1878; the want of sufficient accommodation at Narrabri School, and the report of Mr. Surveyor Young on the proposed cancellation of the Bingera Goldfield Reserve.

Messages were received from his Excellency the Governor intimating that he had given the Royal assent to the Temporary Supply Bill and the Betting Suppression Act Amendment Bill.

Ministers laid on the table reports from the Government Analyst and the Inspector of Charities, and it was ordered that the documents be printed.

Leave was given to Mr. Wisdom to introduce a bill to regulate the taking of evidence under the Great Seal.

Mr. Pilcher moved the second reading of the Public Roads Act Amendment Bill, the object of which was to prevent the exercise for sixty instead of forty days after notice of the powers given to the Government under the Act 4 William IV., No. 11, in reference to the opening or widening of any road, and to conserve the rights of those who might not receive personal notice within that time of the intention to make roads through their property.

Mr. Baker said it would no doubt be better if a more complete notice could be given to the owners of property; but if the bill were passed it would sometimes be impossible to open new roads owing to the difficulty of finding the owners of the land. At the present time there were practically three notices; first, when the surveyor went on the ground; next, the preliminary notice in the Gazette and local papers; and then the final notice of the intended confirmation, so that there could not be much harm done to any one from want of notice.

Mr. Greenwood was opposed to the bill on the ground that it would be retrospective in its effect, and would render void all that had been done under the Act 4th William 4, No. 11.

Mr. Farnell thought the law was inadequate, but that it should not be amended in this piecemeal way. It would be better to postpone the bill, and let the Government introduce a comprehensive measure on the subject.

Mr. Buchanan approved of the principle of the bill, the object of which was to protect the rights of those through whose property it was proposed to make roads for the public benefit.

Mr. Badgery thought the bill should be withdrawn till a more comprehensive measure could be introduced.

On the motion of Mr. S. C. Brown, the debate was adjourned for a fortnight.

On its being moved that the Electoral Bill be read a third time,

Mr. Buchanan inveighed against the amendments made in the bill relative to deposits by candidates and the voting by electors for the full number of members to be elected, the insertion of which had led him to the determination to vote against the third reading.

Dr. Bowker, Captain Onslow, and Mr. Pilcher spoke in opposition to, and Mr. Garrett defended the full voting clause.

Mr. O'Connor addressed the House at some length in condemnation of the voting clause, and argued that, as he had heard Sir Henry Parkes state that it was his intention to introduce such a clause, the proposal to insert the clause contained in the bill was the result of a private understanding between that gentleman and Mr. Garrett.

Mr. Melville was opposed both to the nomination deposit and the voting clause.

The third reading was put and carried, on division, by 34 to 7. The bill was then passed, and it was ordered that it be transmitted to the Legislative Council for its concurrence.

The House adjourned at 8.20 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Wednesday next.

In consequence of the length of time now required for the preparation of the annual official returns in regard to the trade of the colony, we have endeavoured to ascertain beforehand, from the best sources of information open to us, the main features of that trade and its relation to the revenue of this colony. The particulars have been published by us in many different forms, as the results have been ascertained, and to-day we give opposite an exposition of the connection of the overland trade with the Customs revenue derived or derivable from the net imports of last year. Our sources of information are mainly official, but the classification and comparison of details have been prepared specially for the information of our readers.

For the year 1879 Victoria sent us produce seaward valued at £1,300,382, of which only £277,611 was dutiable, yielding to our revenue upon the tariff then in force £87,759. For the same year she sent us produce overland valued at £933,999, of which £315,385 was dutiable, and worth £86,203 to our Exchequer. That is exclusive of any payments for pilotage, harbour and light dues, wharfage rates, or any other charge for the heavy outlay to which this colony is subjected for the construction and maintenance of works to promote harbour and rivers navigation and internal communication. The commerce of the colony, both seaward and overland, gets the benefit of that expenditure of public money, and as that commerce is the source of immense private fortunes, it can well afford to pay for the cost of its accommodation. If it does not pay directly, the cost must fall upon the consumers of dutiable articles, upon whom, under our existing system of taxation, the whole burden of government falls, except that part which is met by the proceeds of our policy of alienating the public estate. Our overland imports from Victoria are equal in value to about two-thirds of our imports from that colony seaward, but they contain a much larger proportion of dutiable goods, and they owe to the revenue almost precisely as much duty as the imports seaward. In justice to our people we can no more afford to give up the duty overland than we can the duty seaward, and if ever the two colonies agree to a convention it must not be by one trying to deprive the other, either by legislative or diplomatic tactics, of the revenue to which each is fairly entitled; but by mutual recognition of the actual state of the trade passing between them, and of the claims of each to the same revenue on that trade that would be due if it were conducted seaward instead of overland.

Our overland exports to Victoria last year are in striking contrast to the imports. They consisted of produce to the value of £3,304,764, of which only £6409 was made up of articles that would be dutiable if imported into this colony with a revenue of only £1806. That explains why the Victorian ex-Premier imposed an import stock tax "that he might have something to give up," in the event of a convention with New South Wales. What need the people of this colony care whether the rich Riverine squatters send their fat stock to Melbourne or not? It is not for them to remit any part of the incidence of taxation in order to make Melbourne a better market for live stock than Sydney or Adelaide, and it was a poor compliment to the intelligence and common sense of our public men to suppose that such a consideration would operate with them in favour of an overland Customs convention with Victoria on reduced terms. Our exports to that colony seaward were valued last year at £783,107, of which £120,479 consisted of articles which are dutiable in New South Wales, and would be worth to our revenue, if imported, £45,261. Therefore the seaward trade is more in conformity with the ordinary conditions of our commerce than the trade overland, and that is even a stronger reason why this colony should insist upon a fair equivalent for its Customs duties on the Murray in the event of abstaining from their actual collection.

Turning to South Australia, it will be seen by an inspection of our figures opposite, that last year our imports from that colony were valued at £431,882 seaward, of which only £23,860 were dutiable, worth £3533 to our revenue, and at £289,304 overland, of which £136,607 were dutiable, and worth £38,173 to the revenue, without reckoning wharfage, harbour and light rates, and similar charges. Here there is a larger proportion of dutiable articles imported overland than even in the case of Victoria. Nor is there any compensation in the composition of our exports to South Australia. They were valued last year at £137,440 seaward, of which £21,987 would have been dutiable articles if imported by us, worth £10,490 to the Customs; and at £636,171 overland, of which the insignificant proportion of £320 was dutiable, worth only £62 to the Customs for the whole year, on the basis of our own tariff. Thus we have nothing to give up in consideration of a convention with South Australia. On the basis of last year's trade that colony owes New South Wales £38,000 per annum, either as duties, or in lieu of them, and it would be unfair to the rest of our people to permit residents on the Murray and Darling to escape those taxes upon produce which are paid by the residents of all other parts of the colony.

Nor is this all. We have given opposite a list of the principal articles from which the duty overland is derived. These include £35,188 due on spirits from Victoria, and £17,266 on spirits from South Australia, in both cases nearly one-half of the whole duty payable. But our duties on spirits and wine have been increased by one-fifth, and under the new tariff we doubt whether this colony will receive an equivalent for its revenue from South Australia with a less commutation payment than £45,000 per annum. The two years' agreement between the two colonies, in virtue of which New South Wales was to receive £35,000 per annum, was signed by Messrs. Fitzpatrick and Cohen on the 30th October, 1878, and by Messrs. Morgan and Mann, on behalf of South Australia, on the 27th January, 1879. According to its first article it was to last for two years, from the 16th December, 1877, and therefore it expired more than five months ago. What action have the two Governments taken for its renewal? We are strongly of opinion that the best thing this colony could do would be actually to collect the duties during some one normal year for the purpose of accurately determining their amount. The cost of collection through the Customs is only about 3 per cent., and that is much less than the colony loses from the want of exact and authoritative data. Still no such evidence of a desire to drive a hard bargain has been furnished by the South Australian negotiators as by the Victorian, and it is for the interest of residents on both sides of the Border, to have their trade as free from fiscal restrictions as may be consistent with justice to the whole people.

The curious international incident connected with the extradition of HARTMANN illustrates both the fineness of the mutual relations between the European States, on which much of the peace of the world turns, and the importance of making extradition depend on strict and formal convention, and not on the capricious license of mere international courtesy. HARTMANN was arrested in France on the 15th of February last, on "indications," as it is said, "furnished to the police by the Russian Embassy," but without the knowledge of the French Minister for Foreign Affairs. The next day, the 16th, the Russian Ambassador at Paris (Prince ORLOFF) sent a letter, calling for the prisoner's extradition for a political crime, consisting in an attempt made on the 1st of December, near Moscow, to blow up the train in which the Emperor was supposed to be. Documents indicating HARTMANN were subsequently furnished, on the requisition of the French authorities; and a magistrate from Moscow afterwards arrived with supplementary documents, which he submitted in person to the French Minister of Justice. On the 6th of March, the Minister of Justice laid before the Cabinet the result of his investigations, which, in fact, came to nothing. He stated that the interview with the Russian magistrate had thrown no new light on the matter, and that there was no reason for expecting more, as the investigation in Russia could not be proceeded with against contumacious persons. He concluded in favour of refusing extradition. In the course of the negotiations it seems to have been agreed upon by all parties to leave out of account, as far as possible, the political aspects of the offence, and the demand for extradition as based on crimes exclusively of a non-political character. The immediate results, diplomatic and political, of this affair are well-known. On the final refusal of extradition, the Russian Ambassador quitted Paris without calling on the President of the Republic, or returning the call of the Minister for Foreign Affairs. Prince ORLOFF is next heard of at Berlin, and as having repeated conferences with Prince BISMARCK. It is then argued by those who profess to be more awake than other people to the moods and devices of European potentates, that Russia is alienated from France; that Germany is rejoicing in this alienation; that Russia and Germany are drawing together; and that out of this contretemps the whole European prospects and combinations for peace or war are being shifted round almost the whole circuit of the compass.

The first comment on these proceedings which presents itself is that in France, and presumably in Russia likewise, all the proceedings connected both with the accusation of the prisoner and with the judicial consideration of the grounds for his extradition were conducted in secret. The whole affair was one for police, acting in perfect complicity among themselves, for diplomatists, and for Ministers of State. The public, the press, and the legitimately authorised advocates for the accused were excluded, from first to last, from all participation in the matter. Reference was indeed made at one point, by M. de FREYCINET, to the sensitiveness of the French public on the subject of extradition; but this was treated rather as a vague sentiment which must qualify the judgment of statesmen than as affording any definite clue to the contents of the judgment itself.

Another obvious comment is that there are on the face of the case two distinct grounds of uncertainty, either of which alone is quite sufficient to be the occasion of the excited susceptibility on the part of two Powers which for other reasons have political relations with each other of a kind which cannot afford to be strained or further confounded. One ground of uncertainty was that France has no treaty of extradition with Russia, and it is a moot-point among international jurists—some of the most eminent being found on each side—whether in such a case France was under any legal liability at all. The other ground of uncertainty was that HARTMANN's imputed offence was undoubtedly directed to a political end, the removal from the scene of the present CZAR being, for reasons best known to themselves, an essential item in the programme of a wide-spread political sect in Russia. But independent States are always extremely jealous of sacrificing the character of being harbours of refuge to political malcontents elsewhere. Whether the commission of ordinary crimes in the course of prosecuting a political object does or does not affect the claims of the refugee is a point which, to say the least of it, is wholly unsettled, and yet contains within itself all the elements of violent and insoluble controversy.

It is satisfactory to know that Great Britain has, by the Act of 1870, done its best to protect its international relations against the intrusion of the mere incidents of a criminal proceeding, which are often fanned into a flame of political importance by the loose doctrines of extradition commonly abroad. Every treaty made by England for the purpose of extradition must be made in accordance with the provisions of the Act, the older practice being to make a treaty first, and then to pass a special Act in order to carry it into effect in the English Courts. The result is that the general extradition policy of the country, which of course here includes all the colonies and dependencies, is once for all determined by the will of Parliament, and not left to the casual caprice or ephemeral relations of successive Governments and particular states. The gist of the Act lies in two of its leading enactments. One is that no extradition can be granted except on a public judicial proceeding before the head Metropolitan Police Court, at Bow-street, and on exactly the same quality and amount of evidence being tendered by the foreign Government as is needed to procure the committal for trial of any one accused in this country of one of the same class of crimes. The other enactment is that both on the return to the writ of Habeas Corpus, if the prisoner is already in custody, at any stage during the magisterial proceedings, and up to the last moment before actual extradition, the magistrate or judge is bound, and the Secretary of State is entitled, to refuse extradition should it appear that the real purpose in seeking it is political rather than that of the general execution of the criminal law. Nothing indeed can dispel the vagueness which still hangs round this word "political." But the securities of publicity, strictness in evidence, and the concert of judicial and political authorities would render it difficult in a case like that of HARTMANN either to grant or to refuse extradition without solid reasons. intelligible to the best friends of liberty as well as to the sternest lovers of civil order.

It was not without reason that complaints were made in the Assembly on Wednesday evening respecting the method now in vogue for surveying the Crown lands of the colony. Free selection before survey has proved a very popular cry, simply because there were great and inexcusable delays in getting land surveyed for selection under the old Orders in Council. But now it seems the Government are deliberately keeping the public domain unsurveyed on purpose to perpetuate the glorious uncertainty of the law. When the vote for £257,154 for the survey of land during the present year was before Parliament, and attention was called to a reduction of £40,000 in fees to licensed surveyors, Mr. HOSKINS said: "Until recently there was an exceptionally great demand for land, and an exceptionally large number of surveyors had to be employed. That demand had, however, decreased, and the Surveyor-General had taken advantage of the lull to dispense with the services of a large number of the least competent surveyors." It is small satisfaction to learn on such unimpeachable authority, that our recent extravagant land sales necessitated another piece of extravagance in the form of employing a large number of incompetent surveyors. What would the predecessors of Mr. HOSKINS in the Lands Office say to a charge like that? And how does it bear upon his present intention to offer land at auction at the upset price of 20s. instead of 25s. per acre? If that policy should tempt another inordinate rush for land, will he also appoint incompetent men as licensed surveyors for the purpose of facilitating the process of turning the public acres into gold? Let him keep on his full staff, and survey land in advance of selection, as suggested by Mr. GARRETT on Wednesday, and by several other honorable members years ago. Surely there can be no magic in the terms "free-selection before survey" sufficient to justify the disbanding of our present large staff of competent surveyors on purpose to prevent survey before selection. Mr. HOSKINS says, "We have already in this colony nearly three million acres of land surveyed and open for selection." So much the better, but does he deprecate that or approve of it? What the public want is to have the whole 150 million unalienated acres surveyed beforehand, so that settlers may select homesteads without fear of being ruined by litigation. The present staff can survey four million acres per annum, and there is no justification for its reduction so long as the public domain remains almost as much an unknown land as "the dark Continent," which has just been thrown open to European exploration.

It is, perhaps, natural that among some publicans there should be a disposition to exaggerate the objections they bring against the proposed Licensing Bill. All men are apt to inflate their special grievances. The complaint of a correspondent in a recent issue of this journal that the bill will operate so as to make it a punishable offence for any publican to permit members of his family to indulge in music or dancing, especially when joined by a circle of domestic acquaintances, is an example of this tendency to convert mole-hills into mountains. As our correspondent puts the case, the publican is to become a sort of social pariah. The bill is to throw him back into the middle ages, convert his house into a sort of ghetto, and to subject him to sumptuary discipline of the most oppressive kind. His daughters may not sing lest his license be cancelled. He may entertain his friends by conversaziones, but not a soul must touch an instrument within his doors, and not a couple must swing into dance lest, again, his license be cancelled. In fact, a publican's child may not practise the piano unless it step next door for the purpose, and a publican's wife may not sing lullaby to a publican's baby, except she proceed outside for the occasion. We entirely agree with our correspondent that a condition of the law such as would involve such extravagances of application would be monstrous and intolerable. But he must excuse our remarking that to pretend for one moment that any law would be so administered is just as monstrous and just as intolerable, and can proceed only from an excited and distorted imagination. As a matter of fact the provision against entertainments of music—dancing in public-houses, is in force at the present moment, and yet there is scarcely a hotel of moderate standing in the city which is not furnished with pianos, or in which music is not enjoyed under a reasonable approach to domestic conditions. The proposed new bill adds in this matter no severity to the old one. The right of inspection certainly is added, but no one better knows than publicans how hardly life would be likely to go with any member of the police force who should commit himself by unwarrantable intrusions upon the actual privacy of a decent member of so influential a body as the publicans really are.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

MR. WISDOM obtained leave in the Legislative Assembly, yesterday, to introduce a bill to regulate the taking of evidence by Commissioners under the Great Seal. Mr. Pilcher moved the second reading of a bill to amend the Public Roads Act; some discussion took place, and the debate was adjourned on the motion of Mr. S. C. Brown, in order that time might be afforded to see whether some of the clauses were not retrospective. Mr. Watson moved the third reading of the Electoral Bill, on which a long discussion arose, in which Messrs. Buchanan, O'Connor, Onslow, and Melville, strongly opposed the bill. The third reading was, however, agreed to by 34 to 7.

WE understand that Dr. Arthur Renwick, M.L.A., has been appointed Executive Commissioner for New South Wales, at the Melbourne International Exhibition.

WE are advised that the Amoy-Shanghai cable was interrupted on the 27th instant.

A SUPPLEMENT to the Government Gazette, published yesterday, contains schedules of deeds of grants, being for lands sold or granted previously to the 1st January, 1863 (the date on which the Real Property Act came into operation), which are still awaiting delivery at the Deeds Branch of the Lands Department, and for which no application has yet been made. It is requested that the grantees, or their duly authorized agents or representatives, will apply for the deeds with as little delay as possible. The area of the lands, their situation, the names of the grantees, and whether or not fees are unpaid, and their amount, and other particulars, are given in the schedules, which comprise three or four thousand names.

IN the Supreme Court, yesterday, Mr. Justice Windeyer, in the Jury Court, disposed of all the business set down for hearing. In Love v. Correy, a verdict was given for the plaintiff, for £84 9s. 3d. In Tooth and Co. v. Cottle, the plaintiffs were nonsuited. In Hunt v. Moore, a verdict was given for the plaintiff, with damages £25, without costs; and certain plans to be given to the plaintiff. In M'Bean v. Kennedy, a verdict was entered for the defendant. In Murray and wife v. Harris and Ackman, a formal verdict was entered for the plaintiff, subject to the decision of the Full Court on a point reserved; and in the Bank of New South Wales v. Nesbitt, the plaintiffs, not appearing, were nonsuited. In the Equity Court his Honor Mr. Justice Hargrave disposed of formal matters, and in Cameron v. Lee and others granted a decree for an account. In the Banco Court, before his Honor Sir William Manning and a jury of four, the trial of the case Gogerly v. York, for damages for trespass to land and premises at Port Hacking, and destroying some buildings thereon and removing the materials, was resumed and concluded. the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff, with damages, £600. In Hayes v. the Commissioner for Railways, for damages for injuries incurred in the railway accident at the Parramatta Station on last Boxing-day, the jury assessed the damages at £100.

WE have received from Mr. District Court Judge Meymott a letter, in which he describes as unfounded calumnies the statements recently made, in the Legislative Assembly and elsewhere, reflecting upon his honour and integrity in the administration of his judicial functions.

MONDAY last, the 24th May, being the 61st anniversary of her Majesty Queen Victoria's birthday, was deemed a fitting occasion to afford the inmates of the Government Asylum in Macquarie-street, Parramatta, some special treat in honor of the day; and the arrangements made there, while most gratefully appreciated by the men, reflected credit upon all concerned in their preparation and perfection. The walls of the large mess-room were gaily ornamented with mottoes appropriate to the occasion, and presented a very enlivening aspect. Early in the forenoon warm clothing was issued, so far as was practicable, to all urgently needing it; and about 1 o'clock the whole of the inmates, save those in the hospital (who were also well-provided for), sat down to a well-cooked plentiful dinner, consisting of roast beef and baked potatoes, followed by plum pudding, admirably made, and a draught of sound light ale to all desiring it. The usual loyal toasts were well responded to by the old folk, who seemed determined to test the strength of their lungs on the occasion; and, after three most hearty cheers were given for the matron and the manager of our public charity, as well as several others immediately connected with the management of this institution, the tables were cleared, amid sound expressions of gratification from all. There were no less than 323 inmates on the 24th, all of whom, save the hospital patients, were enabled to sit down to the good fare set before them.

A VERY pleasant evening's entertainment was afforded in St. John's Schoolroom, Ashfield, on Wednesday last. The day had been inclement, and the night, though not wet, was clouded and windy; yet, notwithstanding these disadvantages, a large company assembled. The music of the evening was mainly contributed by the elder students of a well-known ladies' college, and, to judge of the applause, was highly appreciated. A lady recited, with excellent effect, "Mary Queen of Scots" and the favourite "Come Whoam," which Miss Aitken made so familiar to Sydney audiences. Mr. Tecce's reading of "Major Namby" and the Rev. R. Kelly's two recitations, one being an encore, were received with especial favour. The whole concluded with a humorous extract from "Giles's Trip to Lunnen," in the Norfolk dialect.

A FEW evenings since, a very agreeable entertainment was given by Dr. Tucker to the inmates of his Maison de Santé, at Cook's River. A large number of interesting and amusing pictures were shown, by means of a magic lantern, and afterwards there was some lively music. The pillars of the large room in which the company assembled were decorated with foliage, and all the surroundings were made as pleasant as possible. The patients appeared to be well cared for, and those who were able to do so seemed to appreciate the kindness shown towards them, and the efforts made to promote their enjoyment.

A MOVEMENT is on foot to raise subscriptions for the purpose of purchasing a boat for Mr. William Smith, who has for the past eighteen months been engaged in shark fishing in Port Jackson, and has had his boat destroyed in following that dangerous occupation. Several leading citizens have taken the matter up, and it is to be hoped that as the Government do not offer any inducement for people to engage in this praiseworthy work of ridding our harbour of these monsters, private liberality will enable at least one individual to carry on the work. Messrs. Edward Trickett and Thomas Huntley have kindly consented to act as treasurers.

THE sixth annual general meeting of the Equitable Permanent Building Society took place in the Temperance Hall last night, and a large number of members were in attendance. The annual report of the directors and the balance-sheet for the year, both showing the condition and prospects of the institution to be eminently satisfactory, were read and adopted. Mr. Thomas Fusedale was elected treasurer. The following gentlemen had been nominated for the vacant positions of directors, viz.:—Messrs. B. D. Bozon, H. E. Vaughan, John Booth, and A. L. Elphinstone. The three first named, after the ballot, were declared duly elected to the offices. The meeting then terminated.

AT Wallerawang yesterday a complimentary dinner was given to Mr. George Bonamy, who is leaving the district for Wellington. Mr. James Loneragan, J.P., occupied the chair, and there was a large attendance of ladies and gentlemen. A handsome silver inkstand and album were presented at the same time to Mr. and Mrs. Bonamy.

YESTERDAY, at seven minutes to 6 a.m., a fire occurred at the works of the New South Wales Shale and Oil Company, and for a short time there was great danger of a portion at least of the premises being destroyed. It appears that a still, which has only recently been erected, was lighted last night for the first time, and, through some defect in one of the plates, it burst at the time stated, and a stream of oil shot out and immediately ignited. The lighted oil spread in all directions, and it was only owing to the unceasing exertions of the employees, who threw sand on the oil and used the steam fire-pumps on the timber that had caught fire, that a serious conflagration was prevented. As it was, about 150 gallons of crude oil were destroyed, besides a portion of the fence being burned, and the still itself considerably damaged. Several of the fire-engines went out, Hudson's Brigade being first to arrive, but their services were not required. The damage, it is said, does not exceed a few pounds.

ABOUT 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon the premises of Mr. J. Hinton, builder, of 4, Bligh-street, were nearly in a state of conflagration through sparks from the chimney of the adjoining premises setting fire to a shingled roof. Had it not been for the exertions of Mr. Hinton and his men, who extinguished the fire with a few buckets of water, the consequences might have been very disastrous.

SHORTLY after 11 o'clock yesterday morning a small fire broke out in the rear of the premises 553, George-street, Brickfield-hill, occupied by Mrs. Goldring as a music shop. The fire originated in a foul chimney, and dense volumes of smoke issued from the roof of the house, while the falling sparks threatened danger to adjoining premises. The flames were speedily extinguished by the Insurance and Volunteer brigades before any material damage was effected. The turncocks were promptly on the spot, and to their smartness in aiding the efforts of the firemen, much of the credit of the rapid extinction of the fire is due.

THE following remarks on the Chinese question are made in the editorial columns of the South Australian Register:—"The objections taken to the Chinaman on the ground of his being immoral, and therefore a curse to society, is, so far as it is true, perfectly legitimate, and affords grounds either for his total exclusion or for his being made amenable to conditions which will be some safeguard to society against his wholesale indulgence in vice. But it is absurd to put side by side with these objections those urged against him because he is exceptionally industrious and singularly frugal. These are traits in his character which should tell in his favour in any balancing of arguments for and against his admission to the privileges of citizenship. It is certain that the Legislature has a right to say to him, 'We cannot allow you to live here under conditions which amount to a heavy handicap in your favour as against the European. We cannot permit you to come as a mere bird of passage, living poorly, paying little or nothing to the revenue, although requiring a full share of police surveillance and police protection, indulging in vices which are demoralising to yourselves and injurious to the community at large. If you come you must do so on like terms with Europeans. You must conform to the domestic and social customs of the place. You must contribute your share to the burdens of the State. You must respect the laws and submit to their restraints.' These are the directions which legislation should take, and, so far as Australia is concerned, the best way of enforcing such principles may very properly form the subject of united deliberation among the colonies. The thing that is most to be deprecated is trumpery interferences with the rights, or, at all events, with the reasonable claims, of the Chinaman as a member of the community. To attempt to solve the question of Chinese immigration by means such as these is neither creditable to the dignity nor to the common sense of the colonists. Whatever direct legislation is necessary let it be applied in some practical and sensible way. Let it not be left to partisan members of an exhibition commission or to frothy demagogues to apply quack nostrums, far less to take the law into their own hands."

THE Argus reports that the trial of the action brought by Mr. F. F. Bailliere against Mr. J. G. Beaney was commenced in the Supreme Court on Tuesday before the Chief Justice. Mr. Balliere alleges that two lectures delivered by Mr. Beaney—one entitled "Doctors Differ" and the other "The History and Progress of Surgery"—were not written by the lecturer, but by some one employed by Mr. Bailliere at Mr. Beaney's instigation. For the writing of each lecture a sum of £20 was paid to the authors. Mr. Beaney has already paid for the printing, &c., and Mr. Bailliere claims the sum of £50 for his trouble in publishing the lectures—that is, for distributing them gratuitously. He also claims a sum of £89 13s. (with costs of an action) paid to the printers of the catalogue of Mr. Beaney's sale of furniture, &c., in May, 1878. This sum had already been paid by Mr. Beaney to the auctioneer (Mr. Henningham), and he refuses to pay again on the ground that plaintiff and Henningham were partners in the management of the sale. The principal item in plaintiff's claim is £400 for procuring for Mr. Beaney an appointment from the Government to examine and report upon European hospitals. It is denied that plaintiff had any part in obtaining the appointment, and defendant therefore refuses to pay. The case was adjourned. [As our readers have already been informed by telegram, the action terminated in a verdict for defendant.—Ed. S. M. H.]

SHORTLY after Mr. Francis J. Fuller, C.E., had given evidence in a case at the police court on May 25 (says the Newcastle Herald), he appeared again before the Bench, and handed in a written document which he had just received upon leaving the building. This epistle was a threatening letter, written over a roughly drawn sketch of a coffin, and warned him to beware of his head, for having given evidence on behalf of a "blackleg." The sketch was followed by the significant words, "This is your coffin, old man; so look out." The writing was in ill-formed caligraphy, and evidently the production of a half-educated individual. Mr. Fuller openly announced his intention of arming himself that afternoon, and intimated to the Bench that he would not be answerable for consequences, in the event of being molested. At a later stage, Mr. Roberts, on behalf of and by request of the miners on strike, formally repudiated all connection with the letter. The men, he explained, held it to be an emanation of some person antagonistic to their cause, who only sought to bring down upon them a feeling of public disapproval. They denied to a man any connection whatsoever with the author of the epistle. It was handed over to the police for investigation.

THE following is the order of service at St. Andrew's Cathedral, for the First Sunday after Trinity:—Magnificat, Stainer in E flat; Nunc Dimittis, Stainer in E flat; Anthem, "Give Thanks," Sir John Goss.

THE watch presented by the Government to Mr. Brown, for his assistance to the police, was supplied by Messrs. Flavelle, Brothers, and Roberts.

PREPARATIONS OF LEAD.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In my former communication I implied no doubt as to Dr. Taylor's knowledge of the poisonous properties of lead compounds, but that no mention was made of these in his recommendations for the general use of such things. Of course other disinfectants are poisonous, but carbolic acid proclaims its nature by its odour, which, though in an incomplete degree, serves as a sort of warning which only extreme carelessness can disregard. In the case of lead salts there is no such warning. For my own part I prefer carbolic acid, sulphurous acid in solution, or as generated by burning sulphur, and under some circumstances as a disinfectant ready volatility is more valuable than stability. where the purification of apartments is concerned. Dr. Taylor has, he states, found chloride of lead frequently to correct noxious odours when other disinfectants failed, but this in reality is a proof of its deodorising not of its disinfectant powers. I have myself tried the nitrate of lead as well as carbolic acid, chloride of lime, &c., upon certain quantities of a solution of sulphuretted hydrogen, and was not satisfied as to the superior efficacy claimed for it. When time permits I hope to enter on a regular series of experiments with regard to the comparative value of various disinfectants and deodorants. Meantime my object was not to question the bona fides, so to speak, of Dr. Taylor's opinion, but to prevent general careless use of these easily mistaken salts of lead.

Yours, &c.,

May 28. T. C., JUN.

THE SONS OF THE PRINCE OF WALES AT TRINIDAD.—The following gushing account of an entertainment given to their Royal Highnesses Princes Edward and George, by a resident of Trinidad, is given in the New Era, a local journal:—Nothing could have been more gratifying to all concerned than the sumptuous and splendid entertainment at picturesque (now Royal) Coblentz, in honour of the arrival of T.R.H. the Princes Edward and George of Wales. The elder Prince's sixteenth birthday was on Thursday last (January 16), but the ball was on Wednesday, which brought the supper to the very eve of the royal birthday. Our munificent townsman, M. C. the Hon. Leon Agostini, really surpassed himself on this occasion; and it is said that the princely festive entertainment cost thousands of dollars, which we can well believe, when the splendid and extensive fireworks and beautiful illuminations, and other expensive preparations, are taken into account. H. E. the Governor, with the young Princes, Lord Charles Scott (son of the Duke of Buccleuch, and captain of the Bacchante), arrived at about 9, and were received by the Hon. Leon Agostini at the staircase, on ascending which they were introduced to Mrs. Agostini, who stood at the doorway to receive the royal grandsons of the Queen, the eldest sons of the Prince of Wales, and who will probably be themselves famous kings (one or both) in the approaching century! This splendid and truly princely entertainment probably exceeded anything ever witnessed in Trinidad in former years—remarkable alike for its rarity, its profusion, its splendour, and its perfect taste; and if the joyous and jubilant faces of the happy company were any index to their actual feelings, every one must have enjoyed himself thoroughly and completely; and we think none more than these interesting and amiable scions of English royalty and illustrious kings of the dim future, when the men of the present are low in their graves. The Governor and Colonial Secretary wore the insignia of St. Michael and St. George, and the dancing commenced as soon as the band had finished "God Save the Queen." Prince Edward danced with the fair hostess, whose winning manners and pleasant modest demeanour recalled to many her youthful days, when she was not less attractive beneath the paternal roof. Prince George led out Mrs. Knollys; and it was observed that while the somewhat more reserved and dignified Prince Edward (what an historic name!) danced chiefly and pleasantly with the young married ladies, the gay and gushing Prince George devoted himself to the fair Creole demoiselles (a few Europeans), with whom he was joyous and jubilant, joking and laughing and making the pleasantest remarks, some of which, to tell the truth, have been whispered about, and are pleasant and amusing in no small degree, and we can assure T. R. H. open to the least criticism or hypercritical remark. One of them looked joyously forward to his return to England and his august family, which we believe will be in a few months; while another remarked on "Royal Coblentz" (as many suggest that it should now be called, in honour of the rare event) and its glorious tropical views from the terrace and windows, that it "reminded him of old Scotland," probably the dizzy heights of historic Edinburgh and the Holy Rood, beautiful Balmoral, or the picturesque Highlands themselves. Dancing was kept up till 1 o'clock, but many remained until nearly 4; and nothing could have been more thorough and complete than this splendid and truly princely Creole entertainment. We are compelled to break off now, but next week we shall probably give some further details.

Professor Prosdocimi, of the Este Museum, who discovered a pre-historic cemetery on the slope of the hills overlooking that town, has unearthed in the same vicinity 82 tombs, 44 of them violated apparently during the Roman period, the rest untouched, with all their pottery and bronzes. The urns are of three periods, some coloured black, with linear ornamentation; others adorned with circles and wavy lines; others with alternate bands of red and black. Some of the accessory vases might serve as elegant models for modern potters. The bronze ornaments are also very interesting, and a bronze chest bears three designs, comprising in all 17 warriors and a priest, seven animals (horses, oxen, stags, birds, and a dog), several plants, and a kind of chariot with a man seated in it. The Professor considers those the finest pre-historic remains in Italy.

THE COAL MINERS' STRIKE.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEWCASTLE, FRIDAY.

The labourers working for the A. A. Company, now numbering upwards of 160 men, are to be paid this afternoon. It is stated on good authority that many of them have earned as much as £4 and £5 per week since commencing. Strong fears are entertained of a great roll-up of Wallsend and Plattsburg miners to meet the labourers as they return from work, and the police are making active preparations to guard against any violence.

8 P.M.

The rumour about the expected roll-up of Wallsend and Plattsburg miners at Hamilton, to-day, turned out to be a groundless one. When the time came for the labourers to leave the Company's pit, a few miners belonging to the collieries on strike were present, they having been appointed as a deputation to wait upon the small coal fillers and try to come to terms with them. Mr. Jesse Gregson, superintendent of the A. A. Company, was present at the time, and also sub-inspector Thorpe with a strong posse of police, and, in reply to the request of the deputation to be allowed to interview the labourers, they were told that the latter had no desire to hold any intercourse with them.

THE NEW COLONY AT NEW IRELAND.

In consequence of a telegram sent by the Indian authorities at Bombay to the respective Governments of Australia and New Zealand, stating that a steamer called the Genil, flying the Liberian flag, had sailed from Aden, and that as the vessel was supposed to be on a filibustering expedition, it had been deemed advisable to warn the Australasian authorities of the matter, there has been a large amount of speculation upon the subject, as well as a little excitement throughout the colonies; and, in fact, in Victoria the affair has been looked upon so seriously, that instructions have been sent by the Government to the various coast stations to report the appearance of any strange craft without delay.

The particulars we have already published have, no doubt, been sufficient to dispel any illusions regarding the Genil. If not, the additional information kindly supplied to us by the representative in Sydney of the Marquis de Rays, the owner of the vessel, cannot fail to remove any lingering doubt that may exist. The accounts of the barque Chandernagore which have appeared in the Herald have acquainted our readers with the fact that the Marquis de Rays, the Bolivian Chargé d'Affaires in France, is displaying a remarkable amount of energy and enterprise in founding a colony on New Ireland. He fitted the Chandernagore up at his own expense, and she brought out to Port Breton (which port does not yet appear on any published maps), otherwise known as Likiliki Bay, New Ireland, about one hundred immigrants for the new settlement. They are of mixed nationalities. The ship was well found, and in addition to a supply of stores for the immigrants, she brought out machinery for distilling, for sugar refining and seed crushing, steam crane, incubators, sawmills machinery, agricultural implements, a very large quantity of bricks for building purposes, and other articles necessary to ensure the success of the expedition, and the formation of the new settlement. The Marquis de Rays, subsequent to the sailing of the Chandernagore, from Flessingen, fitted up two other vessels, both steamships, for the conveyance of additional emigrants to his new colony; and it is one of these vessels, the Genil, that is credited with the conveyance of a filibustering party to carry on operations on the Australian coast. It will be in the recollection of our readers that we stated in our columns of the 17th instant that the Genil (s.) had sailed from Barcelona on the 13th March, in connection with the expedition to and colonization of New Ireland, which has been so energetically pushed forward by the Marquis de Rays and his friends, and of which the barque Chandernagore, which is at present in Sydney, was the pioneer vessel.

Doubtless the alarming view which the Indian Government took of the case was from the fact that the vessel had on board a corps of over 200 soldiers, or rather armed policemen, which it has been thought desirable to send out, not only for the protection of the settlement from any disturbances which the cannibals may make at their privacy being intruded upon, but also to regulate and keep the peace among the colonists, who will number some eleven hundred persons. These men are all old soldiers who have had good conduct stripes awarded them, and who in years past were commanded by the Marquis de Rays.

The Genil, which is named after a river in Spain, is a steamer of 350 to 400 tons register, and was bought for the expedition in July last. Before that she was trading between Liverpool and Barcelona; she carries very little cargo, being fitted out more for the passenger trade. After her purchase by the Marquis de Rays she was taken to Antwerp, where she was thoroughly overhauled, and loaded her present cargo, which consists of three sugar refining and crushing-mills complete, a quantity of sawmill machinery, appliances for clearing the land with speed, also picks, shovels, axes, &c. The cargo also comprises some glass, and other materials for a church which is to be erected, and which will be in charge of two priests now on their way out in the Genil. This steamer left Antwerp for her destination, Port Breton, early this year, but owing to the carelessness of some one on board, one of her boilers exploded, and she had to go to Barcelona to repair the damage.

The new colony, under proper management, ought to be a success. Certainly no expense seems to have been spared in order to make it such, and it is sincerely to be hoped that it may prosper and open up a trade between New Ireland and Sydney. It is expected that the Genil will come on here after she has discharged her cargo and passengers, in order to take the Marquis' representative and Commandante of the expedition—M. de la Croix de Villeblanche—who is at present in Sydney, back to the new colony.

In order to show the amount of interest which is taken in the expedition by some few speculators in France, Spain, and Belgium, we may mention that several companies have been formed to thoroughly work and push the industries of the colony. One company was started to grow and refine sugar, and in a very short time the capital of the company had been subscribed for three times over, and consequently operations will be started on a far larger scale than had been previously thought possible. Other companies have been started, to stimulate the growth of coffee, the clearance and cultivation of land, &c.

The fact of the Genil flying the Liberian flag may be accounted for by the knowledge that the United States law, under whose flag it was intended to sail, does not allow the registration of vessels, or for them to sail under her flag and protection unless they have been built and are owned in the United States, and in consequence of this the Liberian flag was chosen.

It may be mentioned that the Roman Catholic Society of Havre have presented the new colonists with a beautiful statue of the Virgin Mary, which was brought out by the Chandernagore.

BARMAIDS AND THEIR DANGERS.—Soberly and seriously (says the London Daily Telegraph), it is not by any means of barmaid shows, however decorously they may be conducted, that a social shortcoming may be set right. That some measure of reform is necessary, as regards the employment of young females in the bars of public-houses of a certain character, no one who has given the matter the consideration it deserves will venture to dispute. It would, of course, be doing a highly respectable body of tradesmen gross injustice to assert that barmaids one and all are to be pitied on account of the degradation to which they are condemned and the temptations and perils to which they are subjected. It may be safely conceded that the majority of publicans are men in whose well-conducted establishments the young women employees are as carefully considered as their own wives and daughters. There is no impropriety in employing women in the licensed victuallers' business under such circumstances. It is an advantage to the publican, since a female can be engaged at about half the wages a man would expect, and in the opinion of the great majority of bar-frequenters the presence of a bright and cheerful young woman, smart and neat-handed, is much to be preferred to a server of the other sex. But it is no secret that there are hundreds of public-houses at the bars of which none but men should be permitted to officiate—places that are supported mainly by a class of customers that, to put it mildly, are never other than rough and unruly, and reverse of choice in their manners and language. There are taverns, and they may be reckoned by the score in the metropolis alone, at the bars of which from early evening until midnight there crowd, and drink until they are drunk, wretches, women as well as men, of the worst neighbourhoods, and whose familiar conversation is of a kind that a man would tingle with shame if his wife or daughter should by accident hear but a mere scrap of it. And at such places, barmaids—mere girls of 16 or 18—are employed, waiting on them and mixing with them, save for the strip of counter that stands between. It is not as though such cases were isolated. It is a fact, challenging contradiction, that hundreds of poor girls are so misplaced. And let it be borne in mind that originally these bar assistants must come of respectable parents, and have a character that will stand the test of strict investigation. With his money at her mercy, the publican had need be most particular on this score. But how is it possible, especially for a young female inexperienced in the ways of the world, to be brought into constant contact with so much that is contaminating without results deplorable as they are irremediable? It would be an act of mercy if the publican body would give this matter their charitable consideration. No community of tradesmen are more generous and benevolently disposed towards all connected with their craft, as their noble asylums for the helpless and destitute testify. Let them, then, kindly consider if it is not possible to draw a line at the class of public-houses in the bar of which a young girl may fairly and in justice be employed.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL REGATTA.

The Sydney Grammar School boys have on various occasions displayed a strong taste for the culture of aquatic and other sports, and yesterday the first Grammar School Regatta took place in our harbour, and a long list of races, well filled, coupled with an exceedingly fine day, made the event a most successful one. The Lillie Denham (s.), Captain Billet, was engaged as flagship, and embarked some 150 persons at Woolloomooloo Bay and the Circular Quay. It is proposed that the club shall hold these regattas periodically. At present the racing is confined to sculls, pair oars, and double sculls, but at the next gathering it is expected that four-oared races will be introduced. The lads appear a fine robust lot, and showed both good rowing and pluck in the events of yesterday. Mr. A. B. Weigall acted as umpire, and Mr. C. D. Goldie as starter. When the racing had terminated, the prizes were distributed by Mrs. Weigall. The following are the events that took place:—

First Race.—Single sculls; distance, three-quarters of a mile. Prize, presented by Mrs. Fache. First heat: C. Sparrow 1, A. H. Thomas 2, F. Guy 0. All three fouled at the start. Sparrow then got away first and won. Second heat: J. Cox 1, T. Old 2. Cox took the lead in this heat, and maintained it throughout.

Eighth Race.—Double sculls, open to all boys attending Sydney Grammar School; distance, one mile. C. Hawkins and H. Woolnough, 1; F. Smyth and H. Molineaux, 2.

Ninth Race.—Three-quarter mile. Morrice and Gorrick, 1; Smith and Marshall, 2; Brown and Darcy, 3. This proved a tight race between the first and second boat, and they fouled towards the end of the race. A protest was entered by Smith and Marshall, and, it being sustained, they were adjudged the winners.

HANLAN v. TRICKETT.

A meeting was held at Trickett's International Hotel, last night, for the purpose of considering what steps should be taken in connection with the challenge which has recently come from Hanlan to Trickett to row a match in England. Mr. Charles Cowper occupied the chair, and about fifty persons were present, including Mr. J. Merriman, M.L.A.; Mr. T. R. Smith, M.L.A.; Mr. D. O'Connor, M.L.A.; Mr. R. Hill, and Mr. John Bennett.

The Chairman apologized for the absence of Mr. Driver, M.L.A., whose interest in sports, he said, was widely known, and who he would like to have seen occupying the chair. He also read a letter from Mr. George Thornton, apologising for that gentleman's absence, and expressing his willingness to participate in any movement that would tend to the credit of the colony. Mr. Cowper also stated that Mr. F. Hill would explain the object of the meeting perhaps better than he was able to. He believed the object was a most noble one, and he hoped it would be supported by every native of the colony. They must do all they could to keep up the credit of the colony. He believed Trickett's first visit to England did more honour to New South Wales than anything that could possibly happen. Before it took place the people at home took very little notice of the colony. This visit, he believed, would be as beneficial to the colony as the other, and when it became known that £1000 or even £2000 would be required to accomplish it, the amount he felt sure would be subscribed in the most generous manner.

Mr. Frank Hill explained that he had been in telegraphic communication on this subject with Mr. F. Wentworth, who was at present in London. He had received a telegram to the effect that Hanlan had accepted Trickett's challenge, and on communicating with Trickett, he said he was agreeable to go home to pull a match in November. No doubt Mr. Wentworth—who had acted on behalf of Trickett in this matter—could make no better terms. All attempts to bring the men together heretofore had failed. It appeared to him that it now rested with the meeting to say whether it should send Trickett home or not. He thought there was sufficient public spirit in it to do this, and he did not anticipate that there would be any difficulty in procuring the necessary funds. But if there were any difficulty in this direction, he believed Trickett was prepared to go home on his own account, and that Mr. Wentworth would effect all necessary arrangements for him. He was sure Mr. Wentworth would not permit the matter to fall through. The sum of £150 had been promised here already, and he had only solicited assistance from a few, and he thought that individually he could guarantee the collection of £300.

Mr. Richard Hill remarked that they should consider the difference between the climates of New South Wales and that which Hanlan was accustomed to. November weather in England was very severe on Australians, but it would not be likely to seriously affect Hanlan, who was used to cold weather. They should therefore consider whether Trickett, who was accustomed to warm weather, would not be under a disadvantage in pulling in November. He thought that if Hanlan were so disposed he could readily agree to pull in warm weather. If these questions were satisfactorily disposed of he did not apprehend any difficulty, so far as money was concerned. He had seen Mr. Driver on the subject, who expressed his warmest desire that it should be carried into effect, and he had also seen Mr. James Punch, who said he would rather be left alone just now, but might go with Trickett.

The Chairman said they must consider how far they should be bound by what Mr. Wentworth had done. If that gentleman had fixed November for the match he thought they were bound to support him. He would admit that a more genial month might have been selected, but no doubt Mr. Wentworth had done everything for the best. Rather than lose the chance of bringing such men together, he had no doubt agreed to November being fixed upon. Although it was a bad month, the question was whether they would permit the match to fall through. Personally, he was strongly inclined to support Mr. Wentworth's actions.

Mr. J. P. Garvan said that, in order to bring matters to a practical issue, he would move the following motion,—"That this meeting decides to send Trickett home, and to provide the necessary expenses." The matter was a national one, and no doubt it would receive support from others than natives.

Mr. H. C. Gleeson seconded the motion.

Mr. O'Connor regarded the object as one which should enlist the sympathies of the whole colony, for the honour of the colony was at stake. He was not a native, but he would maintain that no person could live in the country without feeling a pride in Trickett. This was an occasion when the rich men of the colony should have been present, and if they were not there he hoped they would be generous with their subscriptions towards sending a man home who was a credit to them all. He had so much confidence in the man that he felt certain he would return with additional laurels, and he feared matters had gone too far for considering what month the match should be pulled in.

The motion was carried unanimously, and a large committee was formed to carry it into effect. Mr. C. Cowper was appointed secretary, Mr. F. Hill treasurer.

It was then announced that £300 had been subscribed in the room, and that one gentleman had promised £100 more towards the expenses.

At a committee meeting, held subsequently, it was resolved that the following message should be transmitted by wire to Mr. Wentworth to-day:—"Committee have decided to send Trickett ship Orient." It was also stated that Mr. P. G. Clark had communicated with Melbourne on the subject in hand, and had been promised some very hearty co-operation from that quarter.

AMUSEMENTS.

THEATRE ROYAL.

Taylor's cleverly written comedy, "New Men and Old Acres," was performed with commendable verve by the London Comedy Company last night. The smoothness and occasional brilliance of the dialogue was faultlessly maintained. The acting throughout was excellent. The scenery, especially in the second act, is more effective each time it is seen, and bears close inspection. Indeed to those in the dress circle three visits at least are necessary to thoroughly realize the beauties of Mr. Gordon's handiwork, the central view, and that afforded on each side, deserve equal attention. Miss Blanche Stammers is singularly winning as Lillian Vavasour; her genuine fun, prettily said slang, mimicry of Lady Matilda (as patting Bertie's cheek after her lecture on the imprudence of love-marriages, she concludes her advice "Never forget this, my darling"), her horror of "cads" all is so naturally shown. Then, too, her emotion is so gradually revealed, her loyalty to her mother and the family fortunes so unselfishly sustained—her consciousness of right motives so thorough—that when troubles seem very thick at Cleve Abbey, she can boast to the sentimental Fanny that she has a light heart and a healthy appetite; and is by no means disposed to mortify herself by spending a morning in an oratory which contains a lovely "Death's head" in ivory, and to sigh over "In memoriam." Anything more perfect in acting and surroundings we have never witnessed on the Sydney stage than the love scenes between Lillian and Samuel Brown among the ruins. So beautiful are those ruins that one sees the curtain fall with regret when the picture is shut out. Every young Australian should see it, that he may realize some of the architectural glories which make Home so dear. The inimitable Marshall, as Mr. Bunter, with his better half (Miss Annie Taylor) mixing his pounds, piety, preaching, and practice so oddly, is an unfailing source of amusement, and the universal satisfaction when he admits he cannot "be done Browner," is a tribute to his excellent acting; his would-be fine English is wonderful. He conjures Fanny to be calm, warns her against pre-Raphaelite notions and "clandestical" rendezvoosings with a gravity which is irresistible. Mrs. Stammers and Mr. Shepherd are a splendid pair, and support each other well—the gusto with which Marmaduke rolls out "Mineral rents and royalties," is marvellous, and the diplomacy savoir faire and business qualities of Lady Matilda are developed in true form. Mr. Garner has resumed the part of Secker, of which he makes so much. Mr. Farren, too, deserves remembrance. Mr. Cates is a good Bertie, and even "Montmorenci" does his duty. Mr. Warde is very popular as Brown. The piece and the company were most favourably greeted, the band too did well, the music was good, clarionet and cornet solos, more than fairly played. A galop "In the tramway," by F. Bonocorti, shows that the composer has good musical ideas, and knows how to convey them characteristically through the orchestra. The last three nights of "New Men and Old Acres" are announced.

VICTORIA THEATRE.

"The New Babylon" at the Victoria Theatre is nearing the end of its run, but its successor is not yet announced.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.

"Hamlet" was played last evening at the Queen's Theatre, Mr. Dampier assuming the name part, and Miss Kate Douglas playing Ophelia. Mr. Dampier was very successful, and he earned his success, for his impersonation of Shakespeare's best character is carefully studied, and boldly worked out. To-night a new drama, turning upon the present state of Russia, will be produced. It is called "The Nihilists," and will be mounted with great attention to detail.

KELLY AND LEON'S OPERA HOUSE.

This place of entertainment will be closed for a week, commencing from to-night. The interior decorations will be completed during that time, and on Saturday night next this pleasant little house will be re-opened.

BURWOOD SCHOOL OF ARTS.

The Burwood Dramatic Association gave their first entertainment on Thursday evening last. The piece performed was Halliday's celebrated comedy, entitled "Checkmate." The spacious hall, capable of comfortably seating four hundred persons, was crowded to excess, every available space being occupied. The two principal characters, Martha Bunn (lady amateur) and Sam Winkle (Mr. Matthews), were admirably sustained. Every point was made, and the audience kept in a continual roar of laughter during the whole of their performance. The representation of the other two most prominent characters—Charlotte Ruse (lady amateur) and Sir Everton Toffee (Mr. E. G. Lumsdaine)—are equally worthy of praise. This society has been formed for the purpose of raising funds to defray the expenses of erecting a proscenium and furnishing the stage with scenery and proper stage fittings. The beautiful "act drop," representing a Christmas scene, was very kindly presented to the society by Mr. John Bennett, of the Victoria Theatre. The scenery is also from the Victoria Theatre, Messrs. Renno and Sons being the artists. The improvements to the hall, which have long been wanted, render it one of the most convenient and beautiful amusement halls in the suburbs of Sydney.

CHIARINI'S CIRCUS.

There was another large audience in this mammoth circus last night, and the entertainment provided seemed to give universal satisfaction. Miss Nellie Reid was particularly successful in gaining the plaudits of her auditors for her skilful horsemanship, and her almost marvellous control over her Kentuckian charger, and Miss Rosa Lee's clever juggling while on a bare-backed horse also met with marked appreciation. The other attractions are so numerous, and of such a high order, that it is no wonder the performance as a whole gives such general satisfaction. In addition, the strictest order is maintained, and civility and attention are always shown to visitors by the ushers. There will be a matinee this afternoon, and the usual performance in the evening.

The "Hyperion Party" are doing excellent business at the School of Arts, Mr. Rice's mind-reading and Lieutenant Colville's comic selections pleasing their audiences very much.

Our Goulburn correspondent telegraphs that Professor Haselmayer has given several most successful performances there this week.

The Australian Cricketers.—The Home News, in an article on the English cricket season, says:—"The question of rivalry brings us face to face with what promises to be a great disappointment. Another Australian team, including Spofforth, C. Bannerman, Blackham, Murdoch, Boyle, and several new men of colonial reputation, will be in England all the summer, playing local eighteens all over the country, and yet only three or four matches have been arranged in which there will be any real test of skill between English and Australian players. The notice of the intended visit came after the chief matches had been arranged, and since the Sydney riot there has not been a sufficiently cordial feeling here towards the Australians to allow of the match-list being in any way rearranged to suit them. It is, however, admitted that the Australians are first-class cricketers, and able to hold their own against our best county teams; and, this being so, it certainly seems unworthy of our great cricket clubs to exhibit any temper in the matter, and allow the suspicion to get abroad that they are sulking over what was undoubtedly very bad treatment, but which they should have been magnanimous enough to forget. The public at large will not look upon the Australians as people to be avoided, even if they do not lionize them after the manner of 1878, and the danger exists that the cricket authorities, in their apparent policy of ignoring the Australians, may bring about a revulsion of public opinion in the latter's favour. It is difficult to believe that the London public will not wish to see the Australians, but as the programme now stands they will not appear either at Lord's or the Oval. After all, the public support cricket, and the cricket societies cater for the public, whose desire always is to witness the best possible play. It is true that the Australians should have given longer notice of their coming, or, better still, have deferred their visit for a year or two, as the visit itself seems more in the nature of a commercial undertaking than a journey in search of fresh laurels; but these facts will not diminish the public interest in Spofforth's phenomenal bowling, Blackham's admirable wicket-keeping, Bannerman and Murdoch's first-class batting, or the many other excellences of the colonial play. Whatever may be said to the contrary, we shall not be free from reproach if the Australians do not play on one or two of the metropolitan grounds, and against at least one team really representing English cricket."

We direct attention to the advertisement in the auction column intimating the sale of "Rockwall," one of those choice and improved properties, in Macleay-street, Potts Point. The mansion is surrounded by grounds about three acres in extent. Day of sale Wednesday, June 2. Cards to view will be given by the undersigned. Hardie and Gorman, 133, Pitt-street.—Adv.

THE KETTEN RECITALS.

The attendance last night at the Masonic Hall, was, if possible, larger than ever, and the bright costumes of the ladies, who had a large majority in the numbers, gave unusual brilliance to the appearance of the room. Mr. Ketten began with the grand sonata of Beethoven in F minor, op. 57, a portion of which was given at the second recital; last night, the magnificent work was performed and the grand Allegro assai, with its opening theme of impassioned beauty, received that interpretation which its poetic development demands through the inspiration of the artist who performed it. The second part of this movement cannot be described in words; the chief materials of the first part are varied, developed, and combined with new ideas, and produced in a free fantasia sparkling and glowing with picturesque beauties which must be heard to be realized. The interpreter seemed to revel in the music he played. The Andante con Moto, with its wonderful variations, and the final movement Allegro non troppo, have been already noticed at length. They were as magnificently played as before, and the whole may be fitly summed up as a stupendous reproduction of a truly noble composition. Schumann's characteristic illustration of carnival life was a second solo of large proportions, it was received with such favour at the second recital, that the artist was urged to repeat it. The carnival has been thus described:—From four notes, according to German musical nomenclature, A S (E flat) C H (b), Schumann has constructed a series of pieces—"scenes en mignonnes"—which "came into existence incidentally." It is a work of which one may truly say the genre is small, but the writer makes its great by his truthful colour, his defined form, and exquisite workmanship. The Preamble, quasi maestoso, leads us into the crowd, the masks are called, and in the piu moto we hear the rushing of the people crowding in; a moderato ushers in Pierrot, the clown, and following his grotesque antics comes the viro describing the capers of Harlequin; then a valse noble, followed by the entrance of Florestan, a name which, with Eusebius was adopted by Schumann as a name under which he often sought to give utterance to his inner nature. Later we find the Sphynxes, the four letters written in old characters; first S, C, H, A, the musical letters from Schumann's name, and second as Asch, a Bohemian town in which a lady friend of Schumann resided. Next follow the Papillons, flitting about with butterfly ease and rapidity; then the Lettres Dansantes, in which, the four letters above written are at presto speed carried from place to place. An agitato marks the entrance of Chopin, and an animated pianissimo "Reconnaissance" suggests the sudden recognition of friends in the motley group; the Aveu is the passionate avowal of love; then comes the Promenade, that interesting walk which follows the excitement and exertion of the quick galop, and after a pause, comes in grand climax the "Marche des Davidsbundler (Schumann and friends) contre les Philistins"—the struggle of youth and progress against their adversaries, the dogged humdrum slaves routine, Herz Hünten, &c. The onslaught is terrific; the valiant Davidsbundlers have faith in their cause, their pluck is invincible, and their frolicsome triumph at the discomfiture of their foes is plainly heard. Again the enemies form in line, but back they are driven, and the termination is the complete victory of the youngsters. Schumann, as though carried away by the happy result, writes his march in 3-4 time, contrary to the usual form. Some of the pieces from this carnival have been published separately in "Album Leaves." Mr. Ketten's playing of this excited rapturous applause, and a number of floral trophies were presented, one of which was so beautifully and artistically contrived as to demand special notice: A wreath of flowers (not perishable ones), red and white mingled with leaves, was fastened with broad streamers of the republican colours of France, deeply fringed with gold, and broidered on them, in golden letters, "P. Giorza à H. Ketten, con ammirazione," the whole was the handiwork of Signora Giorza, and was presented by her husband to the eminent artist, who seemed much gratified at so graceful an offering from one of his fraternity. The acclamations may be imagined; the encore they secured was one of the greatest displays of pianoforte technique which the most vivid fancy can suggest, and one of those triumphs of improvising which belong only to the gifted few. After a truly beautiful introduction, the melody of "Home, sweet home" was heard, and then toyed with in countless forms—in chords, arpeggios, with left hand, with right hand, winding its way through marvellous runs, interminable shakes, persistent reiteration, and every variation that fancy could conceive or skill execute; it was little short of supernatural as a technical exhibition, and more than that as a glimpse of genius. A fourth great solo was the "Rakoczy March," by Liszt, a massively written inspiriting number, with startling modulations, intricate harmonies, and transitions which astound the listener. This, too, evoked a second encore, and the melodious and beautifully descriptive morceau, "Castagnetta," was given by the author. Space forbids our noticing every number in detail. The effects of the presto in E minor (Mendelssohn), the Etude in E major, and Polonaise op. 26, No. 21, of Chopin, with the solo from Boccherini, can be supposed by those who have heard other works of these masters interpreted by Mr. Ketten. So also, mentioning the paraphrase of Verdi's "Rigoletto" commends its attractions to the memories of those who heard the second recital. The deeply impressive Funeral March was repeated, by request; and four new numbers of Mr. Ketten's compositions given in addition to the wonderful "New Caprice." Another Lied ohne Worte, this time a joyous Spring song, full of tune and life, like the sunbeams at play in a garden, or the birds carolling as they fly; a vigourous solo, called Chant des Marins, a Danse Bohemienne, melodie, rhythmic, and vagrant, and a brilliant, graceful Valse in B flat. We have already given our hearty opinion as to the originality and poetic feeling which pervades the "Ketten" numbers of the programmes; it is superfluous to add that these characteristics are embellished by every grace and charm which thorough knowledge of and familiarity with the powers of the instrument which is the medium of interpretation can impart. The new Caprice maintains its place as one of the most remarkable compositions we have heard. We have omitted the number of recalls and reiterated applause, to avoid needless repetition.

To-day Mr. Ketten gives a matinée at 3 p.m.; and an evening recital, which is announced as the last but three.

NEWCASTLE STEAMSHIP COMPANY.

The following is the ninth half-yearly report:—

Your directors submit, with pleasure, the usual half-yearly report of the company's operations:—The capital has been increased (through 1253 shares being taken up) to £10,032, leaving £3968 of unallotted capital yet for distribution. The balance at credit of profit and loss is £4348 9s. 11d., from which your directors recommend that the sum of £2000 be applied to re-valuation of ship property (making that account £18,000), and £1800 to insurance fund, which will then stand at £3000; and that the usual dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum be declared. The latter will absorb £478 16s., leaving a balance of £69 13s. 11d. to carry forward to profit and loss. The steamers of the company have been maintained in thorough order and efficiency, and merit a continuance of the liberal support hitherto accorded by the travelling public to the Kembla and Collaroy; but your directors feel that, in view of the increasing trade of the company, it will be necessary to make provision for obtaining a new steamer of the most modern and approved type, specially adapted to the requirements of the Sydney and Newcastle traffic.

The dividend will be payable at the Company's offices, Newcastle and Sydney, on and after Monday, 31st instant.

The Attempt to Blow up the Lord Mayor of Dublin.—In the course of his speech at an election meeting held in county Carlow, Mr. Gray, Lord Mayor of Dublin, one of the candidates for the county, made a statement which occasioned some excitement. He said that several parcels of dynamite had been placed under the platform by persons hostile to his candidature and that of Mr. Macfarlane. The diabolical plot, which might have resulted in great loss of life, had happily been discovered in time, and the dynamite had that morning been buried at some distance from the spot where they stood. The design was to scatter abroad those who sought to vindicate their rights as Irishmen. What would they think of men who would support their principles by such means? God forbid he should suggest that Messrs. Bruen and Kavanagh had anything to do with these explosives, but, whoever devised the plot, it had failed.

STOCK, STATION, AND PRODUCE REPORTS.

Harrison, Jones, and Devlin.—Stations: We note sale of Marowie, owned by the late Joseph Smith, with 17,000 sheep and 3000 head of cattle, to Mr. Laidlaw, of Victoria, and have inquiries for good pastoral properties. Fat Cattle: 1369 yarded for the week, being equal to the supply. Of this number 689 were penned on Monday, the quality throughout being good. Sales opened with a fair attendance of buyers both from town and country, closing rates being compatible with last week's quotations, say 12s for prime and 10s for medium. On Thursday 785 were drawn for. Of this number 680 came forward. We sold—28 bullocks (M'Kenzie, Brothers') at £4, 19 cows (ditto) at £2 13s 6d, 10 bullocks (G. Cheeke's) at £4 5s 6d, 10 cows (ditto) at £2 1s, 6 bullocks (A. H. Martin's) at £3 15s 6d, 14 cows (ditto) at £2 7s 7d. Fat Sheep and Lambs: 9500 penned, which may be looked upon as a short supply, more especially just now, as the Meat Company are executing large orders of tinned mutton for the Imperial Government, which tends much to clear the market and improve prices. Although many lots (but small) were offered on Monday, they were eagerly sought for. We sold a consignment from Blayney, ewes and wethers, to 10s 2d, and on Thursday a consignment of crossbred ewes. We quote 60-lbs, at 12s 6d; 50-lbs. at 10s 6d; 44-lbs. at 9s. Lambs sell readily—say, prime, 10s to 12s; medium, 7s 6d to 9s; and middling, 3s 6d to 5s. We sold—350 mixed sheep for Messrs. Glasson, Brothers to 10s 2d, 300 crossbreds for Mr. A. Booth at 12s 6d, 80 wethers for Mr. F. M'Farland at 9s 3d, 600 mixed sheep for Mr. J. Acres at 6s. Store Cattle: A slight inquiry still maintained. Store Sheep: Nothing fresh to report under this heading.

Pitt, Son, and Badgery.—Fat Cattle: We have had a lighter supply than for some time, but as the buyers were full from last week's glut, sales showed very little animation, and closed about same as the beginning of the week. We have a fair supply en route, and with the quantity of dead meat arriving, we expect no material improvement. We have sold—152 bullocks (Viviers') at £4 16s 10d; 9 ditto (Ivory's) at £5 1s; these are the top averages of the week; 130 ditto (Munroe's) at £4 8s 4d; 187 cows, (Caton's) old, at £2 12s 6d; 35 ditto (Badgery and Cropper's) from £2 3s to £5 13s. Fat Sheep: All arrivals have been taken by the butchers and Meat Companies at full rates, and we look for a healthy market, as owners prefer holding to shear, to accepting low prices. We have sold 582 at 10s 5d, 312 at 10s 7d, 798 at 10s 9d, 240 at 8s 7d, and 150 at 6s 6d, all by auction at Homebush. Fat Calves: Market lightly supplied, and best quality 25s to 35s; medium, 15s to 20s. Fat Lambs: Best sorts selling fairly, but medium and inferior dull, making 2s 6d to 5s. We sold 150 at 7s 5d. Store Stock: Demand confined principally to sheep, and we have great difficulty in meeting demands. We quickly place all we get particulars of, and at improving prices. Horses: Light horses are dull of sale, and only heavy good sorts attract attention.—May 27.

Griffiths and Weaver.—Stations: We have nothing fresh to report. Inquiries continue, and will, we hope, lead to many sales, but vendors are unwilling to sell at late rates, as they are confident that better prices will shortly be obtainable. Fat Cattle: Prices have declined in consequence, and best bullocks cannot be quoted over £4 15s to £5. Dead meat by the quarter has been selling at from 3 to 4 farthings per lb. We sold 200 bullocks, on account of the executors of the late Mr. Francis White, at £4 15s 3d per head. Fat Sheep: Values have receded slightly, say 6d to 9d per head. Best merino wethers in made 11s 6d; good to medium, 9s 6d to 10s 6d; best merino ewes made 8s; good to medium, 7s to 7s 6d; best crossbreds to 12s 6d. Store Sheep: The demand still exceeds the supply, and transactions for delivery in wool are limited to small lots. Sales are now being made for delivery off the shears, and we expect to see a very large number change hands before long.—May 27.

Brunker and Wolfe.—Stations: Continued confidence is manifested in these securities. Further sales are reported this week, and some good properties are being negotiated for. Fat Cattle: The lightest supply forward for some time. The large number crowded into the market last week has had the effect of diminishing the demand this, and enabled buyers to neglect lots offered on speculators' account. Several prime drafts were for this reason sold at a considerable decline on late rates. Best pens of bullocks made to £5 15s, good to £5, and fair to £3 15s, or 13s 6d per 100 lbs for best and to 12s for other qualities. We sold on Tuesday 108 bullocks (W. and C. Durham's), fair to good, £3 19s to £5; average, £4 10s; 23 ditto (Alexander Bowman's), good at £4 1s to £4 19s; average, £4 11s 1d; on Thursday 120 bullocks, from Piallaway, good at £4 to £5 5s; average, £4 11s 3d, being far away the best sales of the week; and at Maitland, 32 head (A. Bowman's), bullocks at £3 15s to £4 9s, cows at £2 13s 6d to £3 6s; 17 head (R. Clark's) bullocks at £2 10s to £3 9s, cows at £2 15s to £4; 164 head (Mr. M'Millan's) bullocks at £2 10s to £3 15s, cows at £2 9s to £2 16s; 103 head (J. Cooper's) bullocks, culls at £2 to £3 7s. Fat Sheep: Prices are unaltered. Wethers, best offered, made to 10s 9d, and best crossbreds to 12s 6d. We sold 501 crossbred sheep, from Goulburn, at 11s 1d to 11s 5d; 65 merino, ditto, at 9s 4d; and at Maitland, 160 sheep (Leard's) at 8s 1d to 8s 3d; 505 (Messrs. Clark's) at 9s to 9s 7d; 72 (Vickery's) at 8s 1d to 10s 9d. Fat Calves and Lambs: Calves were scarce, no prime lots offered. Lambs were plentiful, and prices for best easier. Inferior and fair lots were difficult to place at nominal values. We sold consignments per steamer at 10s 3d, 10s, and 9s 9d; and per rail at 7s, 6s 6d, 6s 3d, 6s, 6s 1d, and 5s 10d. Store Stock: There are few suitable sheep offering, and transactions are necessarily limited. In cattle there is no perceptible change, the time of the year being unfavourable for stocking paddocks for fattening. We have some choice lots on our books for private sale.—May 29.

William Inglis.—Fat Cattle: The supply this week was rather shorter than usual, though sufficient to meet ordinary requirements, and a firmer tone pervaded the market. Best beef sells from 13s 6d to 15s per 100 lbs.; second quality and inferior in proportion. Sheep: A heavier supply than usual forward, but fair rates were obtained; best wethers sold from 8s 6d to 10s. Milch Cows: The sale this week was rather dull, though a few of the best brought good prices. I sold 53 from £2 2s 6d to £13; also a team of six working bullocks for £25. Calves: Supply was only moderate, and for really good prices firmer. I sold 30 (Cooper's), 13s 6d to 28s; 10 (M'Kinnon's), 13s to 20s; 14 (Mulholland's), 15s to 23s 6d; 10 (Walton's), 14s to 17s 6d; and 31 others from 5s 6d to 26s. Lambs: Supply about equal to requirements; good sold fairly. I sold 60 (Moyle's), 10s 9d to 12s; 40 (Pearse's), 6s 9d to 10s 6d. Pigs: Supply not sufficient for weekly requirements, and a material improvement in prices. I sold 161 from 11s 6d to 47s.

Maiden, Hill, and Clark.—Fat Cattle: A smaller supply than usual to hand for Tuesday's sales, including some nice-quality lots from the Hunter. Owing to the large number forward last week most of the trade had a supply on hand, and consequently there was not such a good attendance, and sales were rather dragging throughout. Thursday's supply included two prime drafts from Liverpool Plains and the Hunter. The market opened rather better, but sales dragged considerably as they progressed, and on the whole prices show no improvement. There is a fair supply en route, and coupled with the large quantity of dead meat coming to hand, we cannot expect any great alteration in values for some little time. We quote best worth 11s 6d per 100 lbs beef seconds, 10s; others proportionately, and have sold 82 cows for Mr. E. Vickery, Mungyer, at £3 7s, by far the highest price for cows this week. Fat Sheep: Tuesday's market opened dull, and prices were fully 6d per head lower; on Thursday values were about the same, except for medium descriptions, which were rather easier; 56-lb wethers are worth 11s to 11s 6d, according to skins; 50-lbs, 9s 6d to 10s; and others proportionately. We have sold 300 wethers for W. Lee, jun., Esq., at 10s; 500, W. Kite, Esq., 9s 7d to 9s 9d; and 1357 for Messrs. T. L. Richardson and Co., Corenga Downs, at 7s 8d to 8s 6d.—May 28.

John Bridge.—Fat Cattle: About the average number were yarded this week, for which a fair demand existed at prices about equal to late quotations, say 12s to 15s per 100 lbs. for best beef. Fat Sheep: No superior lots were in to-day, but competition was very firm for qualities offered. Ordinary weights realized 9s to 10s 9d, and one pen of fair crossbreds sold at up to 12s 6d. Lambs: This week's sales have been at 5s to 10s; no choice lots in. Calves sold at 10s to 30s, according to quality. Pigs: Arrivals are still heavy, and prices remain unchanged. Best weights sold at up to 3½d per lb. Wool: No sales were held this week, but we may look forward to good prices on account of the continued firmness of the home market, which most likely will be sustained for some time. Sheepskins are firm at 6½d to 7½d for best long-woolled lots, and 5½d to 6d for fair parcels; pelt and burry skins are worth 3d to 5d. Hides: Heavy weights were rather easier, and worth 3½d to 4d for lots in ordinary condition, or 18s to 24s each, whilst for light weights prices were higher, at 3½d to 4½d, or 12s to 16s each was paid. For calf, yearlings, and horsehides there was active competition at high prices. Tallow: Market firm still at 25s to 27s for beef, and 27s to 30s for mutton in shipping parcels; trade lots, 18s to 26s. Beeswax is in request at 10d to 11d. Flour: Scarcely any business has been done lately; holders expect higher rates than buyers care to operate at, except for immediate trade requirements, for which best brands have been sold at £10 15s to £11 10s. Leather of all sorts is scarce; sole selling freely at 8½d to 10d, harness at 11d to 15d, bridle at 10s to 15s, bag at 9s to 12s 6d; kip, best 16d to 17d, medium 14d to 15d; tweed, heavy 14d to 18d, light 20d to 28d; basils remain very scarce at 8s to 14s per dozen. Bran still scarce, and in good demand at 10½d to 11½d. Pollard: Supply limited and firm at 10d to 11d. Wheat continues steady at late quotations, viz., 4s 5d to 4s 6d for best samples, and 4s 3d to 4s 4d for fair lots. Oats continue in good demand at about last week's rates, say 2s 5d to 2s 8d for best. Barley has been scarcely so firm since date of my last report; good samples are worth 4s 3d to 4s 6d. Maize: Arrivals have been very heavy during the week, and sales have been made at 2s to 2s 3d for best, and 1s 9d to 1s 11d for medium quality. The principal sales have been at 2s (for fair lots). Liverpool salt is steady at £8 to £6 10s.—May 28.

Ross and Hipgrave.—Stations: We have not any sales to report, but have some large transactions pending, and for which we hope to close shortly. The demand at present is for good sheep properties, and those offering at anything like a reasonable figure are readily inspected. The great difficulty now is bringing vendors and buyers together as regards value. Fat Cattle: The number forward for the week has been smaller than for some time past, but owing to the heavy supply last week prices obtained showed no improvement. Best beef is worth 13s 6d per 100 lbs. Fat Sheep: Small supply penned for the week, the majority being of only middling quality. Good wethers sold at an advance on last week's rates. Quotations—Best merino wethers, 11s 6d. Store Cattle: There appears a better disposition on the part of buyers to invest. We have had inquiries for good bullocks of fattening ages, but prices offered are below venders' ideas of value. Store Sheep: There are still many on the look-out for suitable lots of young sheep, and we have some good lines under offer.—May 28.

Wilkinson, Graves, Minchin, and Lavender.—Fat Cattle: Inferior descriptions receded in value from 5s to 10s per head, whilst prime cattle held fully last week's prices. Fat Calves: 200 came forward; prices about the same; best calves, 40s to 45s; good, 30s to 35s; others, 7s 6d to 10s. Fat Sheep: Good quality was scarce, and such descriptions sold well at an advance, whilst medium and inferior descriptions showed no improvement in values, but rather the reverse. We sold 1000 ewes for Messrs. Donnelly, Brothers, Berambula, and 419 for Mr. G. P. Wilson, Pomingalarna, at currencies. Fat Lambs: 350 forward, being a medium supply; majority inferior. Prime lambs sold at from 10s 6d to 12s 6d; others, 4s to 5s. Store Cattle: This market remains unchanged, buyers being scarce and unwilling to give prices asked by sellers, and until there is some marked change in the fat cattle market we do not look for much improvement. Store Sheep: The demand for all classes of sheep is still increasing, particularly for wethers, of which we could place very large numbers at satisfactory prices. The supply is not nearly equal to the requirements, and consequently the wants of our numerous buyers, for all classes of sheep, cannot be supplied. We shall have some large transactions to report next week. Stations: The demand for good properties of all sizes is decidedly upon the increase. It is difficult in most instances, however, to bring vendors and would-be buyers together.

P. N. Trebeck.—Stations: There is a an active demand for sterling sheep properties that would give a good return on the capital invested. I have had several inquiries this week, and could place two or three large stations at satisfactory rates. The prices asked by vendors are, however, considered rather high, but as sheep are getting nearly full-fleeced, a consideration is expected for the increased value of wool. I have placed under offer a freehold and sheep station near Carcoar. There have been some inquiries for cattle stations during the week, but buyers are not yet disposed to purchase, except at very low rates. The Kidgar Station, Bligh district, has been sold this week at a fair price. Grazing Estates: I could place a good property of about 20,000 acres at a fair price. Store Cattle: There have been more inquiries during the past week than for some time past. Buyers will, however, only operate at low rates, say 50s for bullocks and 25s to 35s for mixed cattle. I have completed the delivery of 500 heifers from the Bulloman station, Queensland border. Store Sheep: The demand is still active, but good lots of young sheep are getting scarce. Good young wethers are salable at from 6s 9d to 7s 3d per head. Fat Cattle: Prices show a slight fall on last week's rates. The best beef is worth about 12s per 100lbs. medium 8s to 10s. Fat Sheep: There was only a limited supply this week, and prices are firm. The following are the market rates:—54lb. wethers, 10s to 11s; lower weights in proportion; crossbreds up to 12s 6d.—May 28.

Mort and Co.—Wool: The quantity available in this market since we wrote on the 7th ultimo has been limited, and, with the exception of "Exhibition" lots, not of an attractive description. The demand has been well maintained throughout. Latest English telegrams appear to indicate that the high level of prices reached at the commencement of the current series were somewhat forced, and that the market is gradually assuming, although a quieter, a more reliable position. The immediate cause of lower prices is attributed to the partial withdrawal of French orders, caused by the trade strikes which have recently occurred in France. The greatest advance was in crossbreds, and these have now suffered most and are quoted at 2d to 3d per lb lower than in February—March sales; other descriptions are reported to have fallen to the level of the lowest February rates. The arrivals in time for the current series were exceptionally heavy, reaching 408,000 bales, of which 35,000 were forwarded for direct consumption to Yorkshire and the Continent. That values should have been so good with such a full supply must be matter for congratulation, and speaks well for the healthiness of trade. The sales will close on 8th June instead of the 12th as first arranged. Prospects here for the ensuing season continue to be favourable, an exceptionally sound and well-grown clip is anticipated. Quotations in the local market may be given as follows:—Greasy, average to good, 10d to 11d, good to superior, 11d to 13d; faulty, 7d to 9d: washed fleece, medium, 17d to 18d; good to superior, 19d to 24d; inferior, 13d to 15d.: scoured fleece, 20d to 24d: ditto skinwool, 15d to 20d. We sold a large number of prize and other wools shown at the International Exhibition at the following values:—Fleece, 36d to 45d: greasy, 13d to 16d: scoured, 25d to 28½d per lb. The shipments since our last circular include 12,363 bales, making a total export of 183,472 bales since 1st October, or an increase of 33,698 bales upon the exports for a similar period last year. Sheepskins have been in good request, and all offered have been disposed of at satisfactory values, although slightly under last month's rates. Quotations:—Full-fleeced, 6½d to 7½d, medium 4½d to 5½d, and short growth 2½d to 3½d per lb. Stock and Stations: There is more activity in the demand for these securities than has been noticeable for a considerable time past, and several very important transactions have recently taken place. The advance in the value of wool, which is still at a high level notwithstanding the late fluctuation in the market, together with the prospect that the outlet for our surplus meat will be fully availed of, is having the effect of again attracting the attention of capitalists to pastoral investment, and if owners are disposed to treat at reasonable figures, we have no doubt a large business will shortly be done. Cattle properties are rapidly coming into favour, and with anything like success in the formation of the export meat companies now in hand, must speedily acquire very much higher values than at present. Among others we notice the following recent important sales: The well-known "Havilah" Estate, Mudgee, for £80,000, Mr. H. C. White, purchaser; and "Canonbar" Station, Wellington District, with 60,000 sheep, 10,000 cattle and horses, stores, plant, &c., for the lump sum of £150,000, Mr. William Allison, purchaser. Stud Sheep: Flockmasters appear to be more than ever alive to the importance of improving their sheep to the utmost extent, and there is consequently an increasing demand for high-class stock to meet which, we shall hold a large sale of pure bred sheep from Tasmania and elsewhere in July next and to which we beg to direct the attention of intending buyers. Since our last report we have sold, on account of the French Government, the following from the National Sheep Stud Farm of Rambouillet, Seine-et-Oise:—Ram, 2 years, for 150 guineas, to Captain Chas. Smith, of M'Donald, Smith, and Co.; ram, 4 years, for 121 guineas, to Mr. Thomas Shanahan, of Molonglo; ram, 3 years, for 60 guineas, to Messrs. T. and W. Vivers, of Trinkey; ewe, 4 years, 30 guineas, to Captain Chas. Smith; ewe, 3 years, same buyer, for 36 guineas; 8 ewes, to Mr. Chas. Riedtmann, for 30 guineas each; 4 ewes, to Messrs. J. F. and H. White, 30 guineas each. Tallow: The demand for export has continued fairly active, and as freights are easier, a proportionate advance on last month's quotations has taken place. There is a good disposition to do business in mutton tallow, but the quantity available is limited. Lots suitable for trade requirements are readily taken at late rates. Quotations: Beef £26 to £27 10s, mutton £27 to £28, and mixed £16 to £24 per ton. Hides: Arrivals during the month have been below the average, and as competition between shippers and the local trade has been keen prices have ruled very firm for all descriptions. Quotations 4d to 4½d for heavies, medium 3½d to 3¾d, and light and dry 4d to 5d per lb. Horse Hides: A scarcity in the supply has caused an upward tendency, and large sizes well cared for are worth from 7s to 8s, and small to medium 4s to 6s per hide. Leather: Stocks of all descriptions in the sale rooms are limited, and the scarcity of harness, strap, and bag, has caused an advance for these lines. There is enquiry for sole for export, but at present the business done is for local use. Quotations: Sole 7½d to 8¼d for medium, best 8½d to 11d, harness 10d to 12½d, kip 13d to 16d, tweed 16d to 22d, calf 18d to 24d, bag 9s to 12s per side, basils 8s to 12s 6d per dozen. Kangaroo Skins: Most of those now coming to market are badly cared for, and the prices realized must prove unremunerative to owners. Best descriptions are worth from 24s to 31s, medium 15s to 23s, and small 6s to 14s per dozen. Hair: The bulk of that offering is taken for export. Horse tail is worth from 13d to 16d, mane 7d to 9d, and mixed 9d to 12d per lb. Horns can be disposed of at last month's rates, say from 20s to 30s per 100 for large sizes, and 10s to 18s for small to medium. Shankbones are salable at from £6 to £10 per ton.—May 28.

F. L. Barker.—Wool: Since my last report we have news through from London reporting a firm market, which will tend to strengthen prices here. No sales were held to-day by the associated auctioneers, and prices may be taken from my last. Sheepskins are firm, and for all full-woolled skins good prices are obtained, which is owing to the scarcity of greasy wool coming forward. Quotations may be taken from my last. Leather: I have to report a good demand, and prices satisfactory. Sole, kip, and harness are most sought after. I would advise my constituents forwarding such descriptions. Harness is very scarce, and as high as 13d can be obtained for good brown. Hides: The firmness reported in my last I have still to report, and for good heavies 4d to 4½d per lb. was obtained at last week's sale. Quotations—Heavies, 4d to 4½d; medium, 3¾d to 3½d; light and dry, 4d to 5d per lb. Tallow: At last week's sales there was a good demand, shippers being in the market. Prices were satisfactory, and for good beef tallow as high as £27 15s per ton was obtained. Hair, horns, bones, and beeswax in very good demand.—May 27.

Harrison, Jones, and Devlin.—Wool: The cablegram news of the progress of the London sales this week has been scarcely so favourable, and the general tone of the market points to a downward tendency. The quantity catalogued from the commencement of the series amounts to 291,300 bales. There is very little wool arriving here at present, consisting principally of odd lots, and fellmongered parcels. The usual fortnightly sales will be held next week. Sheepskins: These are arriving in rather larger quantities, but as the demand is good as is usual at this time of the season, we look for good prices to rule at the sales next week. Tallow: 510 offered, 490 sold. The market was again very firm, and biddings spirited at last week's prices. Quotations—Best mutton, £27 10s to £28 10s; beef, £26 to £27 5s; mixed and station, £22 to £24. Hides: 4290 offered, 3591 sold. The demand this week was not so brisk, and although no material alteration in price could be noted the market is scarcely so firm. Quotations—Extra heavy, 3¾d to 4½d; heavy, 3½d to 3¾d; medium, 3¼d to 3½d; light and middling, 3½d to 4d. Leather: The sales this week were poorly attended, and biddings slack; consequently the business done was rather limited, except in harness, of which the market is bare and demand brisk. Quotations—Sole, extra heavy, 10d to 11d; fair, 8½d to 9½d; medium, 8d to 8½d; kip, best, 13d to 16d; medium, 12½d to 14d; yearling, 21d to 23d; calf, 20d to 24d; harness, brown, 11½d to 14d; ditto, black, 11½d to 13½d; bridle, 10s 6d to 12s 6d; cow tweed, best, 18d to 21d; fair, 16d to 18d. We sold a fair quantity, but held over a large part of the catalogue till next week. Tin: This market is again considerably lower, latest London quotations being £72. The fluctuating and unsettled state of the home market has led to withdrawal of orders from here, consequently the demand for tin is very limited, and the price for ore has fallen in proportion to the reduced price for metal. Grain: There is a rather better demand noticeable for wheat, and the market must be considered firmer. At our sale to-day we placed some parcels of New Zealand at 4s. Oats continue in fair request, at last week's quotations.—May 28.

Maiden, Hill, and Clark.—Wool: No public sales held this week. The quantity coming forward is very limited and consists of odd lots of greasy and parcels of scoured, both of which command good attention. Quotations are the same as last week. Sheepskins: These are coming to hand in fair numbers, and as a good demand exists we expect good values to rule at our next sale on the 3rd proximo. Leather: Market very firm for all descriptions; harness leather is in very limited supply, and commands extreme rates; bridle and bag are also in request; basils very scarce, and command high prices; sole is in active demand for both shipment and local manufacture. Kip also realizes full rates. Tweeds (if prime) also create keen competition. Calf tweed in short supply. Quotations are—For kip, 14d to 16½d; sole, 8½d to 11d; calf, 19d to 24d; yearling tweed, 21d to 24½d; cow tweed, 18d to 21d; harness, 11d to 13d per lb; bag, 10s 6d to 12s 6d; bridle, 10s to 12s per side; basils, 7s to 12s 6d per dozen. Tallow: Market only moderately supplied. To-day competition by both shippers and the local trade was good, and all offered realized full rates. We cleared our catalogue of 99 casks at—For beef, £24 to £26 15s; mutton, up to £28 per ton. Hides: Market only moderately supplied this week, but as shippers were less anxious to operate and the attendance of tanners small, prices were on the whole scarcely so firm as last week for heavy weights, but light and dry brought full rates. Calfskins sold well; yearlings also created keen competition. Horse hides very scarce, but not much inquired for. We cleared a good sized catalogue at, for extreme heavies, 3½d to 4½d; heavies, 3½d to 3¾d; medium weights 3½d to 3¾d; light 3½d to 5½d per lb.; calfskins, 1s to 2s 6d; yearlings, 4s to 8s each. Hair: Market barely supplied, and prices remain same as last week. Quotations—Horse tail 13d to 14½d; mane, 8d to 9d; mixed, 10d to 12½d; cow (dirty) 4d to 9d, washed 9½d to 10d per lb. Horns and bones: Market unaltered. Quotations—Horns, 20s to 30s per 100; bones £4 to £9 per ton; Beeswax: A good demand exists at from 9d to 11d per lb, according to quality.—May 28.

HORSE MARKET.

George Kiss.—A very limited number of horses passed through the Bazaar during the past week. A few fresh country horses to hand, most of which were sold; but the demand not being very brisk caused some to be passed. A few strong useful horses (broken to harness) and hacks changed hands at fair figures. Well-bred, good, upstanding harness horses ranged as high as £42, well-bred hacks to £27, Abbott buggies to £34 10s, colonial-made buggies (new) to £45, sociables to £46, spring-carts to £14, vans to £17. The usual number of town horses were got rid of at from £4 to £15; weeds from 2s 6d to £2.—May 27.

T. Cosgrove.—Market well supplied with country horses the past week. Harness horses of all kinds were in demand, especially heavy draught and stylish buggy horses. Besides the usual number of light and inferior horses at prices ranging from 5s to £8 17s 6d. In vehicles there was a good business done, new and second-hand buggies selling freely at prices from £17 15s to £57; spring carts sell at from £7 5s to £16, according to quality.—May 27.

BOROUGH COUNCIL.

Alexandria.—The usual fortnightly meeting of the Council was held on May 19. Present—The Mayor (Mr. C. B. Henderson), with Aldermen Madden, M'Namee, Osborne, Hiles, and Jesson. Minutes of preceding meeting read and confirmed. A letter from Mr. Buckland, requesting that Mr. Reuss, sen., be instructed to survey land for Council-chambers, was read and received. A letter from Mr. John M'Donald enclosing cheque for £34 8s., municipal rates, also intimating that he paid the same under protest, was read and received. A letter from Mr. F. H. Reuss, sen., intimating that he had surveyed land in Garden-street for Council-chambers, and furnished Mr. Buckland with copy of same, was read and received. A letter from Mr. J. Rawlings was read, intimating that the Inspector of Nuisances had impounded two horses, which had to be destroyed; also, making a claim for compensation. Moved by Alderman Madden,—"That the letter be received, and the Council-clerk reply thereto, informing Mr. Rawling that his request could not be complied with." Carried. A letter from Alderman M'Namee was read, in which application was made to have the footpath in front of his property in Wyndham-street asphalted, and agreeing to pay one-third the cost. Letter received, and the request contained therein granted. The chairman of the Finance Committee submitted a report recommending the payment of sundry accounts, amounting to £17 19s. 7d., which was adopted. The Mayor reported that the deputation as appointed by this Council had waited upon the Inspector-General of Police, and brought under his notice the disgraceful conduct of young men and boys who congregate at the various corners of the streets in this borough, much to the annoyance of the residents, and that gentleman promised that an additional constable would be stationed in the boroughs of Alexandria and Waterloo, who would reside in the respective boroughs. A report from the Inspector of Nuisances for the past fortnight was then read and received. On the motion of Alderman Madden, it was resolved that, in lieu of the five and a half chain from Raglan-street to No. 1 Culvert, passed for repairs, the same should be done from No. 2 Culvert, going westerly. Alderman M'Namee moved,—"That the resolution passed by this Council on the 21st ultimo, adopting plan and specification for new Council-chambers, be, and is hereby, rescinded." Carried. Plans and specification of proposed Council-chambers were brought up and discussed, and their further consideration postponed for a fortnight.—James Jones, Council-clerk.

ODDS & ENDS FROM THE OLD COUNTRY.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, APRIL 9.

The movement in favour of "Thrift" is not unlikely to assume important dimensions. We English are an industrious, energetic, persevering people; but we are not thrifty. We work like ants or bees, but are mostly as improvident as the grasshopper in the fable. Our hand-working classes especially, with all their self-reliance, rarely study that solid independence which arises from being a little beforehand with the world. If wages rule exceptionally high they see a reason not for saving against the period of inevitable reaction but for working less and living faster; so that the very classes of operatives who are most prosperous during one season are most distressed the next. No doubt within the last six years there has been some improvement in this respect. The "hard times" of which we have heard so much have witnessed a gradual decrease of pauperism, and a large increase of deposits in savings banks, of subscriptions to benefit clubs and building societies. Still the English working-man is not thrifty in the sense in which a Frenchman, a Northern Italian, a Swiss, or a Belgian of the same class is thrifty. He lacks penny wisdom, and neglects details of economy. Much good may be done by showing our hand-workers of both sexes, where and how they may save without abridging the rational enjoyment of life. Lord Derby made a capital speech on this subject at the late meeting in the city, which is to be followed by a series of lectures and discussions. But enthusiasts must beware of overdoing the thing. Thrift is a good horse, and must not be ridden to death. The philosophy of the Bobwig, in his contest with the "Band" and the "Feather,"—that

"To make a mine of gold his own,
And not spend sixpence when he'd done.
Was Heaven upon earth," never was nor will be popular with Englishmen. Tell them of increased comforts, greater independence, higher "respectability," and you may get a hearing; but our workmen will not be persuaded to save for saving's sake. Lord Derby himself, though no enthusiast, went too far in his address to the Coffee Taverns Association, at the opening of a new house for refreshment and entertainment, sans alcohol. The success of the coffee taverns is a great gain, cheaply purchased by a falling off in the excise, and the occasion was a fair one for a fling at the extravagance of tippling. But his lordship (who, by the way, used not be self-denying in the matter of stimulants) pushed his argument too far when he subdivided the average cost of an acre of land, and told his hearers to remember that the man who drank a glass of ale swallowed a yard of good arable soil. Life is too short for a sort of calculation which would perplex our daily trading with visions of square measure—would mix purchases with perches, and tangible goods with ideal roods. What is the territorial sacrifice of a family holiday at the Crystal Palace on the strictest temperance principle? or what acreage was washed away by the tea-drinking of that young woman whom Mr. Weller observed "swellin' wisibly before his eyes?" A good cause can dispense with clap-trap. We have just witnessed a real "sunshine holiday;" all the labourers and artizans of busy, dingy London streaming forth in quest of amusement or recreation, and snatching a brief respite from the pressure of daily toil, and from the feverish excitement of the pending elections. All the parks were thronged, every pleasure-garden, museum, or gallery, had its long array of sight-seers. There were 50,000 visitors to the Crystal Palace—nearly 30,000 to the Zoological Gardens, and so forth. Nevertheless, every breezy heath and common within 15 miles of London was alive with happy groups. Of course all this costs money, and what with omnibuses, railway fares, entrance tickets, "goodies" and buns for the children, and sundry refreshments for the adults, the total outlay, without including any form of "alcoholics," would no doubt have purchased a magnificent estate. And yet, and yet—even with Lord Derby's calculations before me—I cannot but rejoice that labour had its wonted Easter holiday. The unthrift which one really regrets is seen in showy but unbecoming and inconvenient dress, in domestic mismanagement, in labour misapplied, in wasteful cookery, in intemperance, and notably in the payment of a high price for a bad article, in order to secure the doubtful advantage of a long credit. The outcry against co-operative stores is very loud, and is an important factor in the present elections; but there never were institutions more fraught with solid gain to the consumer. Their success is in fact one of the great triumphs of free trade. Apropos of this great question, there is a small sixpenny book, by Wm. Augustus Mongredieu, on "Free Trade and English Commerce," which I should like to see extensively circulated in the Australian colonies. It deals with the subject in a plain but masterly style, especially with the popular fallacies respecting the balance of trade, and the excess of imports over exports. Already it has reached a sixth edition.

Professor Nordenskiold, and the officers of the Vega, after having been deservedly feasted and toasted half round the world, have paid a short visit to England. The absence of the Royal Family, and the engrossing excitement of the elections, have made their reception less brilliant than it would have been under ordinary circumstances. Still our various learned bodies have given a warm and appreciative welcome to men who have not merely achieved a difficult enterprise, but opened the way for an important extension of commercial intercourse. Russia, especially, if even she should exchange the paths of tortuous diplomacy and military aggression for peaceful progress, will acknowledge how much she owes to the Swedish professor.

The "affaire Hartmann" has assumed much larger dimensions since I wrote last. I do not lay much stress on the coldness which it has produced between France and Russia, as I never have believed in a hearty friendship between the two countries. Still, the sudden recall of Count Orloff, no doubt, gave great pleasure at Berlin and Vienna, though I do not believe in the rumour that the French Government will retaliate by summoning General Chanzy home from St. Petersburg. But Hartmann—whom, in spite of the reports of the Russian police against him, I am forced to regard as a very great scoundrel—has had greatness thrust upon him in other ways than diplomatic discussion. He has been the occasion of two notable hoaxes. Who it was that forged the correspondence in which Felix Pyat and Garibaldi figured as emulously complimenting the illustrious assassin for his attempted regicide we are not likely to learn. But it was capitally done, and for a day or two drew a good deal of attention till formally denied. The second forgery—of a letter purporting to be from Hartmann himself, and to give details of the Moscow attempt on the Czar's life—was an inferior article, lacking the clever imitation of style and the general air of reality. It served, however, to draw out a disavowal from Hartmann, who naturally objected to being supposed incapable of keeping his own counsel. This disavowal revealed the interesting fact that Hartmann is at present in London. He gives no address, but one might bet on Leicester-square. It is curious to note how extremes meet. Liberty has made England what despotism made Imperial Rome, a "vivarium" for dangerous specimens—a general presence for loose fish. But the last of Hartmann's honours is yet to be recorded. He figures in the latest Irish programme. In addressing an assemblage of Home Rulers, Mr. Biggar has told them that should they not be strong enough in the new Parliament to carry their demands, Ireland will doubtless produce a Hartmann for the emergency!

The boat race ended, as I expected, in favour of Oxford. The Cantabs, though the stronger crew, were fairly beaten by superior rowing. The change of the day into another week did not, I think, affect the event, though it had the blessed effect of throwing the bookmakers over and cancelling all bets made before the Saturday fog. Cambridge has had some consolatory sets-off for her defeat. The second football match of the year went, like the first, to the light blues. In the athletic sports at Lillie Bridge, they won six out of nine events, including the three mile race, which has hitherto been almost monopolised by the Oxonians. As for the University Chess Match, which was played at the St. George's Club on the Thursday before the boat race, it was an absurdly one-sided affair, Cambridge winning nine games and Oxford none. The result was the more strange because Oxford is by no means weak in Chess: indeed two of our most rising players at the St. George's are Oxonians. The losers, I must say, showed admirable good temper, and made themselves very agreeable at the subsequent dinner. The cause of their failure was undoubtedly a want of systematic practice; the Cambridge seven had been regularly working the attack and defence of the openings most in vogue. In active sports nothing has occurred more remarkable than the bicycle performance of the French champion, Terront, who in the late six days' race actually covered 1252 miles—a rate of sustained speed which neither horse nor "hygheen" can approach. Terront has since been beaten in a 100 mile race, but his six days' performance has only once been surpassed, and places him high among the heroes of the bicycle. Wood pavement, by the bye, is encouraging the use of these vehicles towards the west of London, and it is curious to see them bowling down Sloane-street, passing cabby at his best "half-crown pace" with five miles an hour in hand. Cambridge has won the University racquet matches, but lost those at billiards. A great event in the history of the latter game came off on Wednesday, March 31st. The new Sheffield player, Mitchell, who lately won the great handicap at the Aquarium, beat Cook at the St. James's Hall in a well contested match of 1000 up. The champion, it is true, gave the odds of 200, and was only beaten by 109. But as Mitchell, when he ran out with a break of 111, was well settled down on the spot stroke, and might as likely as not have gone on for another hundred or two, the general impression in the room was that he could have held his own without odds. The great drawback on the engagement of the spectators was that the contest was in effect a match at the spot stroke. It was especially annoying to me, who remembers Kentfield's losing hazards, to see the red ball when well placed opposite the middle pocket—in a position whence the Brighton veteran would have "held" his own ball thirty or forty times in succession—deliberately potted in order to lie up opposite the spot. Should the spot-stroke be restricted, as in my view it ought to be, I think Mitchell will beat everything on the field. He certainly shows a marvellous freedom of wrist and variety of execution, and the all-round break with which he commenced his final score was, although a trifle fluky, the most brilliant performance of the evening. The cricket season will begin in earnest as soon as the county elections are over; and as a genuine spring has now succeeded a genuine winter we may hope for a summer and autumn of the old style, which though it will come too late to help Lord Beaconsfield, will be a real godsend to cricketers. The programme of the Australian team is at present not attractive; the matches we want are not easy victories over sixteens and eighteens, but trials of strength on equal terms against first-rate elevens accustomed to work together. There is no doubt at starting a little soreness—or rather shyness—among the best English clubs, in consequence of the "untoward event" of last year. But if the colonial eleven bear themselves as quietly and courteously as they did on their last visit, the offence of a few Australian roughs will soon be forgotten.

I must resume my chess notes for a minute to say that the match between Professor Zukertort and M. Rosenthal is really to come off, and probably will be begun within a fortnight, at the rooms of the St. George's Chess Club. It will be an interesting contest; but I look on the result as a foregone conclusion if Zukertort's health holds good through the struggle. He suffers occasionally from palpitation of the heart, and such an attack might reduce his superiority. At present, however, he is in very good form, and if he is equally fit when the struggle arrives I shall be sorry for his plucky antagonist.

MAIL DAY.

Instead of my usual scraps of miscellaneous news, I am about to inflict on my readers some remarks on the results of the general election—now all but finished—and on their probable consequences. I need not linger over the avowal that those results have surprised and even amazed me. The surprise has, in fact, been universal, as Lord Hartington himself frankly admits. The general impression throughout the country was that the Government would lose in Scotland and Ireland, and scarcely hold its own even in England; but that, considering their actual majority and the number of seats of which they were sure, the question was merely whether they would maintain a bare majority, or would, as seemed most probable, be slightly outnumbered by the combination of parties opposed to them. The leader on the "Coming Contest" in the Saturday Review of March 27 is a fair exponent of the views generally entertained at that date by persons of more than average information. Actually, however, the Opposition have obtained not a mere "measuring-cast" advantage, but a very substantial majority. With a few notable exceptions, which only render the general upshot more striking, they have won "all along the line;" most, perhaps, in the smaller boroughs, which are less swayed by political opinion than by local influences and associations, but largely also in large urban constituencies. Even in the metropolitan boroughs, though the City and Westminster proved thoroughly Conservative—the former more so than ever—there was on the whole a "Liberal" gain. The English counties have generally proved stanch to their old colours; but these were already so overwhelmingly strong on the side of the Government that the Conservatives could scarcely hope to gain anywhere, while they were attacked in so many quarters that it is not strange if, like Dogberry, they have "had losses." On the whole, though I cannot rejoice in the result, I think it is better for the country than if the Opposition had secured but a narrow majority in the new House. A Government with a fair margin of strength beyond the bare requirements of a "working majority" is less likely to prove "squeezable"—less tempted to purchase the support of crotcheteers by adopting crotchets, or of revolutionists by tampering with revolutionary schemes. Still the situation is full of anxiety for all those who object to seeing England a pure democracy; and especially there is profound anxiety among the Whigs as to the complexion of the new Ministry. That Mr. Gladstone ought to be aut Cæsar aut nullus—that he ought either to efface himself as a leader, or to be the head of the coming Government—is universally admitted both at home and on the Continent. I incline to believe that he will resume office, if only to complete his triumph over Lord Beaconsfield. A few words now as to the causes which have brought about this surprising Parliamentary change. Something must be allowed for the influence of money. Supposing both sides equally willing to bribe, there is no doubt that the Liberal mill-owners and manufacturers have a greater command of ready cash than the large-acred men who form the strength of Conservatism. The "Reform" was never so flush of coin. Lord Rosebery has bled to a really princely tune; it is no secret that he subscribed £60,000 to the general election fund, besides special expenditure on behalf of Mr. Gladstone, in Midlothian. But generally speaking, the effect of the fuller purse was seen in the legitimate form of better electioneering machinery—especially in the employment of great numbers of paid agents, who were not content with securing promises but brought their men to the polling booth. Cheltenham is probably the only seat which can be safely affirmed to have been won by bribery. Another far more powerful agent in the mighty change been the enlisting of "all the crotchets" on the attacking side. Ministers in posse can hold out hopes which Ministers in esse dare not encourage. Anti-vaccinationism (pardon me the word), hostile interference with Co-operative stores, expropriation of landlords, local option, which is but the Permissive Bill thinly disguised—these may all be outside the present "range of practical politics," but their advocates have a vague reliance, skilfully if not wisely fostered by Mr. Gladstone, on the favour of the more advanced Liberals. Sir W. Lawson's followers, in particular, have worked with a will. A cry against the use of the cat—addressed to people ignorant of its limitation to armies in the field, and of its necessity there as the humane alternative for military execution—has done the Radicals good service in the large boroughs. Again, as regards the influence of religious bodies, while there exists a strong prejudice against political activity in the clergy of the Establishment, the Romish priests in Ireland have "gone the whole animal" for Home Rule; and the non-conformists, both in England and Scotland, have been intent on cultivating Mr. Gladstone's dormant leanings towards disestablishment. In the Middlesex contest sundry meeting-houses were turned into committee-rooms for Mr. Herbert Gladstone, while his father, in Scotland, was allowed to utilize similar buildings for political sermons. Nor, illogical as it may seem, must that unaccountable element of success known as luck be altogether lost sight of. How many seats might have been saved to the Government by the smallest additional effort can only be guessed; but we know that in the returns of the first three days—very important in their influence on after events—ten seats were actually transferred to the Opposition by an aggregate majority of 150. This run of luck has continued, and, as an extreme instance, Mr. Clare Read, a most useful agricultural representative, loses his seat for South Norfolk by the blunder of a single voter, who wrote, or allowed some one else to write, his name on the back of his ballot-paper. Schiller says that "when a house is doomed in fire to perish," there is a muster of evil spirits to "sling firebrands at the burning edifice." But, without calculating on this branch of spirit duties, I may fairly say that in this case Lord Beaconsfield has been wanting in good fortune—that felicitas which Cicero deems indispensable to a great general. All these things have been against the Ministry. But deeper and wider than these causes lay the desire for change naturally springing up in uncultivated minds after long years of depression in trade and manufactures. It is useless to blink the fact that this battle has been fought and won to an unprecedented extent by the hard-working classes, and that they have voted under a vague impression—diligently fostered by Liberals of a higher class—that the "hard times" have been the fault of the Government. All who have interviewed the British working man largely before or since the elections, have good stories to tell of the reasons given by men who were literally of no politics for "wantin' a change." The best I heard was from Huddersfield, where poaching on the moors is popular. "If they stays in another year," said a patriotic declaimer, "there wont be a grouse on the d——d moor." Briefly, the nearer you get to mob-rule, the greater the probability of unreasoning impulses and abrupt political vicissitude. Lord Beaconsfield has no right to complain if the low borough suffrage and lodger franchise, which he himself introduced, bear their natural fruit. We have had three general elections since 1867, and each have demolished a Ministry. A few words now as to the consequences of the present demolition. Let us look first at Home politics. In the first place—and this is no small blessing—the Home Rulers are dished. They voted everywhere, as Mr. Parnell bade them, for any one who opposed the Government; they have made Lord Beaconsfield's successors strong enough to dispense with and defy them. The Radical party are stronger than they ever were; their new caucus system controls a hundred voters for one whom it alienates, and distributes the suffrages, which are in theory secret and free, with complete mechanical accuracy. The result may be seen by comparing the Birmingham return with that for the city of London. Unhappily some of their recruits are of the lowest stamp; it is sad to read of the return of Bradlaugh and libellous "Labby" as a great Liberal triumph. But something must be done for them, even if Mr. Gladstone remains out of office, for they are strong enough to turn out the Whigs. But with a strong Conservative body to assist a moderate Government in resisting innovation they may not do much mischief. One "leap in the dark" will be taken by assimilating the county to the borough franchise; after which the "Rest and be thankful" party may find leisure for some useful reform which in their hands may receive fair play. As regards foreign policy, there is little fear that the new comers will abandon the lines laid down by their predecessors. They have been forced on the hustings to give up their unpopular declamation against Imperialism, and to profess respectful affection for the colonies which, in other days, it was their delight to snub. Even Mr. Gladstone has ceased to dwell on the "silver streak," and deprecate foreign affairs; he now waxes eloquent as to the primary duty of maintaining our glorious Empire unimpaired.

WEST MAITLAND.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

WEST MAITLAND, THURSDAY.

The question as to what shall we do with our surplus meat has been the subject of much discussion amongst pastoralists and others interested in this district, as it has been in others lately, and the latest movement has been a public meeting, which was held at Brown's Hotel, yesterday afternoon, to take into consideration the advisability of forming a company, or otherwise, for the exportation of meat in a frozen state to England. There was a fair attendance at the meeting, which was convened by Mr. James N. Brunker, and the chair was occupied by Mr. Thos. Hungerford. The convener of the meeting entered very freely into the details of the question, and dwelt strongly on the great success of the Strathleven experiment. With reference to that shipment, he said that the meat was retailed in London at from 2½d. to 10d. per lb. 2½d. per lb. might seem a small price, but he had heard from Mr. Edward Close, who was in England at the time, of the reason of this. Mr. Close told him that portion of the shipment was delivered to him in such a state that if so delivered by a slaughterman in his employ he would discharge him. They were told that some of the meat was in wrappers, and the wrappers were old potato bags which had been used for gunny bags. They could imagine what effect such careless packing would have in London, where provisions were got up equal to the best style anywhere. If the meat brought those prices in that condition, what price would it not bring if they established store houses close to the stations in the interior and shipped it in proper form. He thought the proposal of the Sydney Company to send home meat on account of the owners, and also to purchase stock and prepare it themselves, was a sound and tangible power to give the company. He would not support any movement that would have the effect of opposing the one in Sydney; and trusted those present would take some steps towards assisting such a grand project. Mr. R. Wyndham, of Branxton, and Mr. W. Pearse, of Plashett, Jerry's Plains, also spoke on the subject; and the following resolution was unanimously carried.—"That in the opinion of this meeting all efforts to assist the Sydney Company in carrying out the shipment of frozen meat are desirable." Several gentlemen present promised to take up shares in the Sydney Company, while others promised to do so when they had seen the prospectus.

A shocking accident happened to Mr. J. Minslow, of Bowthorn, near Hinton, a few days ago, and which may possibly result fatally. It appears that Mr. Minslow was riding in his cart on the main road, near Hinton, when his horse was suddenly startled by a passing coach, and bolted. The old gentleman was thrown from the cart, the fall breaking three of his ribs, while one of his ears was almost completely torn off, and the greater portion of the scalp on the left side of the head dreadfully lacerated. The unfortunate sufferer was attended by Dr. Blackwell, who did everything he could for him; but he lies in a very critical condition. He is sixty years of age.

The "wise men of Largs" have been at it again, and it appears that they are determined to have Protection or nothing—that is, if they can get it. They want the Government to impose a tax upon all produce imported into New South Wales from the adjacent colonies, in order that they may find a better market for their hay and corn and everything else. A meeting was to be held at the School of Arts, Largs, last night, to consider the question, but on account of the boisterous weather it was only thinly attended, and those present decided to adjourn until some future occasion—next Monday evening, I think. On the question of adjournment every one had his say, when individual opinions and feelings were squeezed in edge ways. One speaker said that the subject was one of the greatest importance, and he would like to see it discussed openly and fairly in all its aspects. He urged the necessity of united action on the part of the farmers—the bone and sinew of the land—when they were sure to be successful. It is broadly hinted that the next candidate for the representation of Morpeth and the Hunter had better run on the Protectionist ticket.

A new organ recently imported from England, and intended for St. John's Roman Catholic Church, arrived in town this week, and its erection will be proceeded with as soon as the necessary alterations are made to the gallery of the church.

The new Post Office, which is the only respectable Government building we can boast of, excepting the new station, is now approaching completion, and when finished will be a great convenience to the public. The tower is now the only portion of the brickwork left unfinished; the roofing of the main building is complete, and everything is ready for the plasterers to begin. The building should be ready for opening in a very short time.

The parishioners of St. Mary's intend getting the incumbent (Rev. W. H. H. Yarrington) a new residence built, instead of the one at present standing in the parsonage grounds, which is very old and damp, and unhealthy to live in.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL.—ITS UNEQUALLED EFFICACY IN DISEASES OF THE THROAT.—Sir G. Duncan Gibb, Bart., M.D., LL.D., Physician and Lecturer on Forensic Medicine, Westminster Hospital, author of various works on diseases of the throat and larynx, writes:—"The experience of many years has abundantly proved the truth of every word said in favour of Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil by many of our first physicians and chemists, thus stamping him as a high authority and an able chemist, whose investigations have remained unquestioned. Its value, therefore, as a therapeutic agent in a number of diseases, chiefly of an exhaustive character, has been admitted by the world of medicine; but, in addition, I have found it a remedy of great power in the treatment of many affections of the throat and larynx, especially in consumption of the latter, where it will sustain life when everything else fails. Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil has an agreeable flavour, is very palatable, and liked by children; hence its value in the third stage of whooping-cough, when it acts as a restorative and tonic." Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil is sold only in capsuled imperial half-pints, pints, and quarts, and by all chemists and druggists. Sole consignees, Ansar, Harford, and Co., 77, Strand, London. Agents at Sydney—Elliott, Brothers.—ADV.

LAST QUARTER'S BIRTHS AND DEATHS IN SYDNEY.

During the three months ended March 31, 1880, the Australian summer, there were registered in the city and suburbs of Sydney 1898 births and 1087 deaths. The recorded natural increase of population in our Metropolitan division was thus 811 persons in 91 days, at the rate of 3261 in twelve months (Leap Year).

The resident population is estimated at 194,804 for the middle of the present year, namely—99,469 for the city, and 95,335 for the suburbs.

This estimate is based on data supplied by the census of 1871; but it will probably be found much below the facts to be brought out by the approaching census of 1881.

The quarter's numbers, computed on the assumed population, give an annual birth-rate of 39·2 per 1000; and an annual death-rate of 22·4 per 1000.

The birth-rate for the city was 35·2 per 1000, for the suburbs 43·4; the death-rate 23·8 for the city, 21 for the suburbs.

The comparative mortality in the several suburbs, arranged from the lowest rate to the highest, was as follows:—

ANNUAL DEATH-RATE PER 1000 PERSONS LIVING.

1. St. Leonards and Manly	15·4
2. Balmain	16·3
3. Concord	20·4
4. St. George	21.1
5. Newtown, including Camperdown, Macdonald Town, and St. Peters	21·4
6. Paddington, including Randwick, Waverley, and Woollahra	22·1
7. Glebe	22·6
8. Redfern, including Darlington	23·2
9. Waterloo	24·1

St. Leonards still maintains its ascendancy as the most healthy of the nine suburbs; Balmain in this instance comes next; Waterloo being the least favoured of all.

The quarter's numbers, distinguishing the sexes, were as below:—

BIRTHS AND DEATHS IN THE SUMMER OF 1880.

Females	Born ...	439	497	936
	Died ...	289	243	532
Increase of Females ...		150	254	404

The births were more numerous in the suburbs than in the city by 158, while the deaths were fewer by 93. The quarter's natural increase to the population was only 280 in the city against 531 in the suburbs. The increase of males was 130 in the city against 277 in the suburbs; and of females the increase in the city was 150, in the suburbs 254. The result for the whole metropolitan division gave all but an exact equality of increase in the sexes—407 males to 404 females.

The mortality of the quarter in comparison with that of the three preceding summers is exhibited in the subjoined table.

MORTALITY DURING THE SUMMER QUARTER OF 1880 COMPARED WITH THE AVERAGE OF THE THREE PRECEDING SUMMERS.

Particulars.	City.	Suburbs.	Total.

Annual death-rate of the summer of 1880 ...	23·8	21·0	22·4

The number of deaths during the past quarter was below the average in the city (590 against 598), but above it in the suburbs (497 against 384). The death-rate in the city was 23·8 per 1000 against the mean rate of the previous three years, 25·7; while the rate in the suburbs was 21·0 against 18·0.

THE WARDS.—The mortality within the several wards of the city, with their respective areas and populations, are shown below:—

* In Bourke Ward is the Sydney Infirmary.

The ward showing the lightest death-rate is Brisbane, 15·7 per 1000; that of Bourke Ward, where the Infirmary is situated, is of course the heaviest, 61·6 per 1000. It is noteworthy that the ward occupying the most favoured position as regards the rate of mortality is the one showing the greatest density of population, its inhabitants averaging upwards of 90 persons to the acre.

The number of births and deaths recorded for the several districts during each of the last two summers were as under:—

9. St. Leonards	8,104	63	99	22	31

The births are above the average both in the city and in all the suburbs except Paddington, where the numbers are the same, and St. George, where they are slightly below the average.

The quarter's deaths are below the average in the city, and above it in all the suburbs.

The proportions of the numbers to the respective populations are seen in the subjoined table:—

8. St. George	36·3	32·3	12·6	21·1
9. St. Leonards	31·8	49·1	12·0	15.4

The quarter's birth-rate in the city was below the mean of the three preceding summers, but above it in the suburbs. It had risen in all the suburbs except Paddington and St. George. The birth-rate is higher in the suburbs than in the city; higher in the three years' mean by 3·2 per 1000; higher last quarter by 8·2 per 1000. Balmain excels all the other suburbs in its fertility of births.

The quarter's death-rate in the city was 23·8 per 1000 against the mean of 25·8; while in the collective suburbs it was 21·0 against 18·1. In the suburbs severally it was above the average rate in every case except Newtown.

The annual mortality within the city averaged in the three years 25·8 per 1000; in the suburbs 18·1 per 1000. During the past three months the mortality was 23·8 per 1000 in the city, 21·0 in the collective suburbs. The three years' mean was highest in Newtown, 22·7; lowest in St. Leonards, 12·0. For the past quarter the death-rate was highest in Waterloo, 24·1; lowest in St. Leonards, 15·4.

CAUSES OF DEATH.—The zymotic class of diseases (epidemic and contagious) proved fatal to 119 persons in the city, and to 107 in the suburbs; constituting 21 per cent. of the mortality in the former, and 21·5 per cent. in the latter.

Diarrhœa was the most fatal epidemic, having caused 70 deaths in the city, and 37 in the suburbs; respectively 11·9 and 7·4 per cent. of the whole mortality.

Typhoid fever caused 17 deaths in the city, 6 in the suburbs; or 2·8 and 1·2 per cent. of the whole.

Diphtheria caused 4 deaths in the city, 5 in the suburbs; croup, 5 in the city and the same number in the suburbs; dysentery, 3 in the city, 11 in the suburbs.

Deaths were attributed to the class of local diseases in the following numbers and proportions:—

—	Number of Deaths. City.	Number of Deaths. Suburbs.	P. cent. of Mortality. City.	P. cent. of Mortality. Suburbs.
Apoplexy ...	6	14	1·0	2·8
Paralysis ...	9	7	1·5	1·4
Convulsions ...	34	23	3·9	4·6
Heart Disease ...	33	14	2·4	2·9
Bronchitis ...	15	11	1·8	2·2

It is worthy of remark that in all these instances, except one (paralysis), the mortality was higher in the suburbs than in the city; in apoplexy more than twofold.

DEATHS OF CHILDREN.—Of the 1087 persons who died in the metropolitan division, 593, or 55 per cent., were children under five years of age. Of these children, 286, or 41 per cent., died in the city, and 307, or 62 per cent., in the suburbs. Relatively to the estimated number of children living in the respective populations, 14,622 and 15,921, the death rates were 74·1 per 1000 in the city, 77·6 in the suburbs. Can it be explained why the mortality of infants should be lighter in the crowded city than in the open suburbs?

TEMPERATURE AND RAINFALL.—The meteorological observations recorded at the Sydney Observatory for the past three months, as compared with the mean results for the ten preceding summers, show that the mean temperature of the quarter was 70·5, very slightly above the average, 70·5 against 70·3; that the quarter's rainfall was 14·16 inches, below the average by 1·20 inches; and that the number of days in the quarter on which rain fell was 45, the average of the previous ten summers having been 46 days.

VITAL STATISTICS OF THE METROPOLIS.

The following is from the Registrar-General's report on the vital statistics of Sydney and suburbs, for the month of April, 1880:—

SYDNEY.—The births recorded in Sydney during April numbered 344, viz.:—184 males and 160 females, being 164 in excess of the deaths, and 52 above the quinquennial average. The number of deaths was 180, viz.:—111 males and 69 females, being 16 below the previous five years' average. Local diseases gave 45·00 per cent., and the most prominent in this class were,—apoplexy, 8; convulsions, 10; heart disease, 14; bronchitis, 7; pneumonia, 7; enteritis, 5; and strangulated hernia, 4. The proportion of constitutional diseases was 20.56 per cent.,—phthisis, 22; tabes mesenterica, 7; and cancer, 3, being the principal causes of death. Of zymotic diseases the percentage was 17·78, and the leading causes were—typhoid fever, 7; dysentery, 5; and diarrhœa, 6. Of developmental diseases (10·55 per cent.), 5 deaths were from premature birth, 3 from teething, 2 from childbirth (besides 1 from metria), 2 from old age, and 7 from atrophy and debility (infants). There were 8 deaths from violence, viz.—Accidents, 6 (fractures and contusions 5, and child suffocated in bed 1); and infanticide, 2. Nine persons of the age of 70 years and upwards died during the month, viz.—2 males (aged 70 and 74) from bronchitis, 2 (aged 70) from apoplexy and old age respectively, 1 (aged 73) from cancer, and 1 (aged 78) from nephria; 2 females (aged 70), 1 from erysipelas, and 1 from heart disease, and 1 (aged 73) from apoplexy. 50 death, or 27·77 per cent. of the total number, took place in public institutions:—In Bourke ward, Sydney Infirmary, 35, and Hyde Park Asylum, 4; in Phillip ward, Benevolent Asylum, 5; and in Fitzroy ward, St. Vincent's Hospital, 4; Darlinghurst gaol, 1; and Lunatic Reception House, 1.

SUBURBS.—The births registered in the suburbs last month numbered 392, viz.:—210 males and 182 females, being 256 more than the deaths, and 112 above the quinquennial average. The deaths number 136, viz.:—77 males and 59 females, which is 17 less than the average of the previous five years. The highest percentage of deaths (36·76) was from local diseases, primary causes—cephalitis, 4; convulsions, 12; bronchitis, 7; pneumonia, 4; and enteritis, 10. Developmental diseases come next with a percentage of 25·74—premature birth, 6; old age, 6; atrophy and debility, 19, &c. Zymotic diseases gave 21·32 per cent.—principal causes of death—typhoid fever, 3; dysentery, 8; diarrhœa, 7; and cholera 3. Constitutional diseases, 12·50 per cent.—phthisis, 7; tabes mesenterica, 5, &c. There were two accidents (fall from a horse 1, and drowning 1), and 2 murders (one an infant, suffocated, the other a man whose skull was fractured by a blow from a stone). The number of deaths of old people was 6, viz.:—One male, 87, from old age. One female, aged 74, from hepatitis; one, aged 76, from chronic bronchitis; and three, aged 78, 79, and 84, from old age.

In the metropolitan division (Sydney and suburbs) the number of births for the month was 736, and the deaths 316, being respectively 58 more and 25 less than the numbers registered in April, 1879. The deaths of children under 5 years of age within the city were 37·22 per cent. of the total mortality, and 7·56 per cent. below the month's average for the years 1875 to 1879. The percentage in the suburbs was 69·01.

The highest reading of the thermometer, as registered at the Sydney Observatory was (83·8) on the 5th, and the lowest (52·6) on the 26th; greatest range (20·1) on the 5th. The prevailing direction of wind was N.E. Greatest amount of humidity (100·0) on the 2nd; least (53·0), on the 27th and 30th. Greatest rainfall 1·233 inches on the 2nd. Number of days lightning, 6.

The percentage of deaths to population of each ward of the city was as follows:—Gipps Ward, 0·08; Bourke, 0·82 (35 out of the 43 deaths in this ward occurred in the Sydney Infirmary and 4 in the Hyde Park Asylum); Brisbane, 0·14; Macquarie, 0·14; Cook, 0·25; Fitzroy, 0·22; Phillip, 0·28; Denison, 0·23.

The percentage of deaths to population in each of the Registry districts forming the metropolitan division during April was as follows:—Sydney, 0·24; Balmain, 0·33; Glebe, 0·16; Newtown (including Camperdown, Macdonaldtown, and St. Peters), 0·20; Redfern (including Darlington), 0·22; Waterloo, 0·19; Paddington (including Randwick, Waverley, and Woollahra), 0·23; Concord, 0·31; St. George, 0·20; St. Leonards (including Manly), 0·19.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In the speech of Sir Henry Parkes at the opening of the Public school at Blayney, he has drawn a picture of social reform that Robert Owen dreamed of, but which common experience proves impracticable. Sir Henry said, "The parents of no child are too rich to send their children here, the parents of no child are too poor to send their children here, and one great advantage of it and its moral influence is that children of the poor and of their richer neighbour can sit side by side in receiving their primary education." Such a union of classes (even among the rising generation and on the school bench) is not likely to be effected in the present state of society, and "its moral influence" is very questionable.

There is great risk that in attempting to produce this equality, injury will be done to that class for whose benefit the National schools of England were established. While Public schools may not be considered as "established in any spirit of charity"—in the common use of the word—but in recognition of a public duty to a class of the community among whom education had been grossly neglected, great vigilance should be exercised that those for whom the National system was elaborated be not deprived of the advantages designed especially for them.

The dissolution of local School Boards and the appointment of a Minister of Education with a staff of assistants, will devolve great responsibilities on those who will now take the supervision of the large educational machinery of the colony, and they will need to employ great caution and examine most closely, not only in the schools, but throughout the districts, to prevent influences being used to discourage the poor from sending their children to the Public school.

There may be an ambition among some of the school teachers to make their school "respectable," and undue efforts be made to bring in the "better class" of children, while the humbler will be neglected and discouraged. A segregation of class may be attempted within the school very different from the picture drawn by Sir Henry Parkes; which invidious distinction would offend the just pride and independent spirit of the poor, and their children would be withdrawn. Even where such a broad difference is not made, there may be individual preferences equally marked, of deference to one on account of a little higher social position, and neglect of another in a humbler sphere. The teachers who receive boarders may deem it incumbent on them to give special attention to the pupils taken into their house, and this will act detrimentally to the school generally.

Teachers will need to act justly and judiciously to avoid injury to those for whom a public education is chiefly provided, and not impair the value of their office. All pupils must be considered on the same footing, and not greater respect shown to the child whose father keeps a buggy than to the one whose father drives a hawker's cart. There must not be "Sit thou here" to one, and "Stand thou there" to another; and as far as possible the teacher should prevent such difference among the scholars, even in the playground. Ministers of religion and others who have intercourse with all grades will do well to watch over the interests of the working classes, and see that their children are treated fairly in the Public schools, lest these valuable institutions be made mere cuckoo nests.

Yours truly, SENTIO.

"The Memoirs of Talleyrand" will not, it appears, be given to the world till eight years after those of Metternich. When Talleyrand died, in 1838, he left his memoirs to M. de Bacourt, with instructions to publish them thirty years after his death, unless special circumstances should render a longer delay desirable. On the death of M. de Bacourt, in 1865, he bequeathed the memoirs to MM. Andral and Chatelain, forbidding their publication till 1888. It is said that the reason for the further delay was certain references to M. Thiers.

The CUSTOMS REVENUE and the OVERLAND TRADE for 1879.

It has already been shown in our columns that the extensions of our railways southwards and westwards have not yet very materially affected the trade between Sydney and the distant interior as compared with the competition of Melbourne and Adelaide. The following particulars, collected from official sources, will show how this trade affects the Customs revenue of the colony, according to the returns for the year 1879. The duty is calculated upon the tariff in force in this colony for last year, and the duty on exports means the duty that would be payable on the same articles if imported into this colony, a basis of calculation adopted for the purpose of showing the net duty payable on our overland trade:—

Imports from	Declared Value. Dutiable.	Declared Value. Free.	Declared Value. Total.	Amount of Duty.
Victoria—
Seaward ...	£277,811	£1,023,371	£1,300,882	£37,759
Overland ...	315,385	613,614	928,999	86,308
South Australia—
Seaward ...	25,860	405,022	431,882	3,553
Overland ...	136,607	152,697	289,304	38,173
All other Countries	...	...	11,243,280	880,123
Total ...	£ ...	£ ...	£14,196,847	£1,104,791
Exports to Victoria—
Seaward ...	£130,479	£662,628	£793,107	£45,361
Overland ...	6,409	3,388,355	3,394,764	1,886

All other Countries	...	...	8,185,987	...
Total ...	£ ...	£ ...	£13,036,819	£ ...

A cursory inspection of the above figures shows how great is the contrast between our import and our export trade overland. In one case the dutiable articles are equal in value to more than one-third of the whole, and should yield the exchequer a revenue of £124,876, without reckoning wharfage, warehousing, or any similar dues. In the other case the corresponding goods exported, and which, if imported, would be dutiable in this colony, are infinitesimal, and require a deduction of only £1958 from the gross revenue this colony is entitled to receive on its imports overland. The following arrangement of the principal dutiable articles imported overland last year from Victoria and South Australia respectively, may be of service to mercantile men:—

Articles.	Declared Value. Victoria.	Declared Value. South Australia.	Duty Payable. Victoria.	Duty Payable. South Australia.

TRAMWAY EXTENSION.

The tender of Messrs. Topham, Angus, and Co., for the first extension of our tramway system, has been, we understand, accepted by the Government. This firm, it is stated, have constructed a great number of tramways in New Zealand and the other colonies, and by their experience are well qualified for the work they have undertaken. The present contract extends from Hunter-street, doubling the line along Elizabeth-street as far as Liverpool-street, thence along Lyons-terrace, and up Oxford-street to Darlinghurst gaol; then along the Botany Road, through Moore Park as far as the Randwick racecourse. This contract is to be completed by the 1st September next. A slight deviation will be made in the line so as to avoid injuring the trees in Moore Park. The whole of this work is to be carried out by the contractors, with the exception of the rails, the iron fastenings, and the cube sets, which will be supplied by the department. The rails are now being rolled at the Lithgow iron works; tenders for the cube sets will be opened on Tuesday next. Steam motors on an improved principle, by which the noise will be considerably reduced, and the smoke will be consumed, are now being constructed in America, and are expected to arrive here in August next. The tram cars for this line are under construction in Sydney, and are also to be supplied by the same time. Great exertions will be required to have this line ready by the time named, but no pains will be spared to effect this, in order that the public may be conveyed to Randwick races at the ensuing Spring Meeting. Contrasts have sometimes been drawn between the attendance at Randwick and that at Flemington at race times, but it remains to be seen whether the public will not be induced by the convenience of tramway travelling to visit Randwick in greater numbers than they have ever done hitherto.

GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Tenders have been advertised since the 16th April for the supply of 30,000 tons cube sets for the tramways tenders to be sent in on Tuesday, 1st June.

One of the conditions is, "Contractors will be required to deposit with the Colonial Treasurer a sum equal to 10 per cent. of the total amount of their tender as their security for the due performance of their contract."

As the 10 per cent. deposit in such case would amount to £7000 or £8000, it is considered a very hard condition, almost a prohibitory one, unless to some favoured one.

As we have no suitable stone for this purpose in the neighbourhood of Sydney, it requires considerable time to open quarries and finding suitable material to be in a position to tender.

In the face of the above facts, an advertisement, for the first time, appears in your paper of this morning intimating that a deposit for £20 only is required to be sent in with the tender.

This notice will give those who happen to see it just three days to prepare a tender for some £70,000 or £80,000.

I leave your readers to form their conclusions on the above. A CONTRACTOR.

THE COAL MINERS' WAGES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your issue of to-day, "A Coal Master," by a little manipulation, makes errors, and then points them out as coming from "A Practical Miner." I did assert that, as a rule, there were two shifts of men at each colliery, and "A Coal Master" upholds the assertion, in stating they are known as "front and back shift," and, I will add, one shift ceases work when the other commences. The first shift goes down the pit about 3 o'clock in the morning, and is relieved at 10 o'clock a.m., when the back shift commences, by a second shift of men who cease work and leave the pit at 5 p.m., which makes, as I have stated, the day's work of an English coal miner to be 7 hours per day.

"A Coal Master" states that from "1868 to 1872, when the hewing rate was 3s. 6d., the average got was over three tons per man per day. This I admit; but to make it that, what were the hours then worked?—from 4 o'clock in the morning till 6 and 8 o'clock at night. This country was at one time ruled by an aboriginal race, but to-day European civilization is supposed to improve the conditions of life, and in connection with the rights of coal masters, coal miners expect to share equally in the benefits of an advanced civilization. "A Coal Master" doubts my knowledge of the Newcastle district, and states the principal seams have only two bands of dirt, about half an inch in thickness, in them. Those of your readers who examined the coal exhibited at our late International Exhibition will know this to be contrary to fact, and a choice selection is generally fixed upon for an exhibit. I am, &c.,

Sydney, May 28. A PRACTICAL MINER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In the communication from "Your own Correspondent" in Newcastle, and in the report of the meeting of the Trades and Labour Council, held last evening, it is stated that the Associated Masters have refused the miners' delegates another conference.

Both statements are incorrect. Mr. Dixon, the miners' general secretary, wrote me on the 6th May, asking for a conference (which letter I received only on the 8th). Owing to the chairman of the Associated Masters having to go from home, a meeting of the masters could not be held until the 21st instant; on that I wrote Mr. Dixon that the Board did not see that the reasons given by Mr. Dixon, viz., "that the price of coal had gone up to 14s. afforded grounds for a conference, but, at the same time, if the delegates have any fresh proposal to make of a practical character, or are of opinion that they can submit to the masters any scheme for reconciliation, the masters are not unwilling to confer thereupon with the officers and delegates at such time as may be mutually convenient."

Mr. Dixon, under date of the 22nd May, acknowledges this letter, and says:—"I shall lay it before the Board of Delegates early next week, and shall let you know what steps are taken in connection with it."

I have not heard further from Mr. Dixon, and the above gives the position of matters as to the conference said to have been refused.

I will only add that two conferences with the miners, officers, and delegates, have already been held, when the reasons which necessitated a reduction in price, &c., were fully discussed. I have, &c.,

C. W. BINNEY, Secretary Associated Masters.

THE REVIEWS AND MAGAZINES FOR APRIL.

The Contemporary Review contains two papers, of special interest at the present time, on home and foreign politics—one is "The History of Rent in England," by Thorold Rogers; and the other "The Outlook in Europe," by Scrutator. "The theory of rent (observes the writer of the first named paper) has always been a matter of peculiar interest to English economists; foreigners who write about political economy have frequently expressed their surprise at the copiousness with which the topic is debated in England, and have even thought that the attention which Englishmen give to the subject is akin to the eagerness with which everybody who pretends to social position is supposed to purchase a peerage." After alluding to the principal events in Europe since the Franco-German war of 1871, and the complications that have arisen since then, particularly the successive phases of the controversy on the Eastern Question, Scrutator asserts that the French have but one foreign policy, the re-acquisition of the provinces annexed by Germany—that Prince Bismarck's diplomacy has been "fitful"—at one time supporting Russia energetically, then thwarting her; now bullying the Turks, and presently encouraging them by an ostentatious apathy; a "spirited foreign policy" on the part of England which would fight Germany's battles with British blood and gold would be very convenient for Prince Bismarck, and hence the "frantic efforts of the German Press to secure a majority for Lord Beaconsfield in the general election." The writer believes that a "triangular duel" between Russia, England, and France would suit Bismarck very well, and whether he intended it or not his diplomacy was admirably calculated to produce that result. "Events," says Scrutator, "look as if Russia, estranged all round, were about to be forced into Prince Bismarck's political combinations. And then? One thing at least is certain: his policy bodes no good either to the honour or the interests of England." Francis Newman contributes an interesting paper on "Personal Property, Debt, and Interest." "The relations of living beings to one another" is a continuation of essays by Professor Mivart; a biblical study by François Lenoumaut is entitled "The Genealogies between Adam and the Deluge." "The Armenian Question" is discussed by an Eastern Statesman; this important question is well considered by the writer. James Mackenzie criticises adversely Max Muller's article on "Freedom," in which the latter took exception to some of the principles in John Stuart Mills's essay on "Liberty." The Rev. F. Kaufman dilates on the society of the future; and a spirited review of "Selections from the Papers of Metternich," edited by his son, is from the pen of Dr. Carl Hillebrand.

The Fortnightly opens with a semi-scientific discourse by Professor Tyndall, on Goethe's "Farbenlehre," in which will be found some interesting remarks on the properties of light. Mr. Arthur J. Evans introduces his essay on "The Austrian Counter Revolution in the Balkans" with the assertion that "the Treaty of Berlin simply marks a stage in a great revolution—a revolution which Europe will yet look back to as the chief historic land-mark of the nineteenth century;" he then proceeds to discuss the position Austria has gained in Bosnia and Herzegovina, and asserts that after a year and a half of occupation she has failed to settle the agrarian relations of the occupied provinces, and not only is the national character banished from the schools, but the whole scheme of education has been devised as far as possible to subserve the denationalizing propaganda of the Austrian counter-revolution. Mr. Evans concludes with the expression of a belief that if Austria advances to Salonica, and incorporates the Western Provinces of the Balkan Peninsula, it may be predicted with certainty that within a limited number of years the Russian Empire will extend its borders to the Adriatic as well as the Ægean, and that it cannot be too clearly realized that there are only two ultimate alternatives in the Balkan Peninsula—national union, or Russian incorporation. The Rev. F. B. Zincke follows up his reflections on pauperism and territorialism with others on the "Fruits of Territorialism," in which the productive powers of various countries are compared. The Americans, he says, will soon be able to send to England as many hundred head of cattle a day as may be required, and the present system of meat production in Great Britain will make it very difficult to sustain competition with America. The small farmers of Ireland are dealt with by Mr. Standish O'Grady, and the fact that so large a number of very small holdings are to be found in the West of Ireland is attributed to the absence of scientific farming; work is generally done by the tenants themselves, as hired labour is unremunerative. As to how these farmers exist we may quote from Mr. O'Grady, who says—"The expenses of the household, except in the matter of food, are nil; their strong coarse clothes are eked out, by patching, to a period long beyond their normal career; whenever there is a good potato crop it supplies them with food during the greater part of the year, during the remainder they have recourse to the meal merchant. About fourpence worth of Indian meal per diem supports a full-grown man, less than that is of course sufficient for his wife, and less again for each of his children." He comes to the conclusion that the type of character which peasant proprietorship will produce is the very reverse of Irish—it will be cold, prudent, hard-hearted, far-seeing, awake to every chance of gain, and above all exceedingly laborious. Without these qualities existence will be impossible for the Irish farmer. A stern eradication of every other type of character will take place, and the typical Irish peasant of the present day will become an historical curiosity. The remaining articles in the Fortnightly are—"The Marbles of Ægina," by W. H. Pater; "Bagehot as an Economist," by Robert Griffin; "Literature and the Manual Arts," by Sydney Colvin; and a general resume of Home and Foreign Affairs.

In the Nineteenth Century the Right Hon. Robert Lowe reviews the chances of the Liberals in an article styled "The Docility of an 'Imperial' Parliament." The ex-Premier's letter to Lord Marlborough is severely handled. "The Common Sense of Home Rule" engages the attention of Mr. E. D. Wilson, in a reply, and Mr. Justin M'Carthy in a rejoinder. Dr. Carpenter contributes a paper on the "Deep Sea and its Contents;" the Challenger expedition supplies the material, and many interesting discoveries are dilated upon. "Agnosticism and Women" is the title of Mrs. Lathbury's contribution to the April number. The authoress all through the article asserts that the position of woman in the social fabric of the world is essentially different from that of man, and she believes that the spread of agnosticism among women would tend to make them discontented with the quiet home life which is often their only lot; and it would, moreover, increase tenfold the cry of women for the right of employment in the more active lines of life at present denied to them. Mr. Grant Duff, whose name was mentioned as a probable Viceroy of India, reproduces in a more comprehensive form ideas ventilated in some of his speeches, in an article on "British Interests in the East." The present Premier, the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, in the midst of his election campaign has written on "Religion, Achaian and Semitic." The Rev. J. G. Rogers has given a Nonconformist's view of the pending election; and Lieut.-General Sir John Adye writes on the "Native Services of India," a subject of very great importance. "Imperialism and Socialism," by Frederic Seebohm, and "Days in the Woods," by the Earl of Dunraven, complete the review.

The Gentleman's Magazine has several interesting articles, and among them is one by Mr. R. A. Proctor, the astronomer, entitled "Notes on Infinity." Space and time, he says, are forms of thought, and the ideas of infinite space and infinite time are inconceivable; or, in other words, as there is no distance in space so there is no time in eternity. "The Long Parliament," by a member of the Chiltern Hundreds, is a very readable paper. The undignified proceedings of some of the members during that period is alluded to more in sorrow than in anger; the House of Commons, he thinks, will stand comparison in point of good-breeding with contemporary Legislative Assemblies; the episode in the Victorian Assembly, when an hon. member seized a large book and hit another member with it, occurred at the very time when Mr. Biggar and Mr. O'Donnell were giving so much trouble. The wear and tear of office, and a conscientious attention to legislative duties, may be gathered from the following observations:—"Looking up and down the benches one can note how terribly some who sit there have aged since the day when they walked up to the table to subscribe the roll. On no one has the hand of time fallen so heavily as on Sir Stafford Northcote (the late Chancellor of the Exchequer); but four years have passed since he took his seat as Leader of the House of Commons—he is to-day ten years older. His hair has whitened, his head is less erect, and he more frequently than ever relapses into that curiously crushed attitude in which he sits and hugs himself, as if desirous of offering a target as small as possible to adverse shafts of fortune." B. W. Richardson declares, in commenting on "Dress in relation to Health," that the character of the dress of a person stands so near to the character of the person who is the wearer of it that it is difficult to touch on one without introducing the other. "All sorts of sympathies are evoked by dress. . . . Dress is the outward and visible skin of the creature that carries it." Men, women, and children are all treated of in the mode in which they dress at the present time; the paper may be read with profit. Dutton Cook has written a short biography of Mrs. Glover, the actress, with references to some of her contemporaries; and the magazine also contains an interesting article on the "Dog and its Folk-lore."

Fraser is full of solid reading, relieved at the end by a good story styled the "Blues and Buffs," being a sketch of a contested election, by an M.P. Two articles, "Contesting the Counties," and the "Electoral Crisis," are, of course, on the dissolution and general election. Miss. Helen Zimmern has brought Swiss literature forward in a review of the works of Gottfried Keller, the novelist. "National Thrift and its Practical Promotion," by the Rev. W. L. Blackley; and the "Zulu Campaign from a military point of view," by Lieutenant-Colonel Harness, are interesting. In the latter, the writer defends Lord Chelmsford from many of the attacks which have been made on the General's arrangement of the disastrous campaign in Zululand, particularly the charges of incompetence advanced by Mr. Archibald Forbes.

The manner of improving an estate in Ireland is detailed by Mr. Bruce Jones, in Macmillan; and he also gives some particulars of the advance made in the condition of the labourer since 1840. The parochial charities of the city of London are dealt with by A. J. Wilson. The Bishop of Carlisle rescues the memory of Professor Adam Sedgwick from oblivion in a biographical record of his talents and his usefulness. Edwin Arnold's "Light of Asia, or the Great Renunciation," is reviewed by Stanley Lane-Poole. In this poem the King of Siam sent Mr. Arnold a letter together with the order of the White Elephant, to mark his Majesty's opinion of the service he had done in defence of the Buddhists. There is an anonymous paper on "Backseesh," showing what has to be paid for an audience with a Turkish official.

Cornhill has three articles of interest to the general reader. "The Illusions of Memory," "The Regicides of this Century," and reflections on Burton's "Anatomy of Memory." A romantic story of the "Chivalrous Criminal," Epplein von Gailingen, and a paper on Moliere's manager at the Theatre Français, also form part of the April number. Speaking of the English stage, the writer of the latter says:—"Altogether the English Theatre is, for the moment at least, in a bad way; but for Shakespeare, Sheridan, and the dramatists of modern Paris that, Way would be worse than it is."

An analysis of the "Husband," by Annabel Gray, is, perhaps, the best thing in Tinsley's Magazine. The patient husband, the grumbling husband, the hen-pecked husband, are all described with the minuteness of a careful observer, and one who seems to draw correct conclusions. With all the faults of married men, however, Mrs. Gray regards them as the mainstay of England's greatness and prosperity; "for," says she, "they pay heavy taxes and rates, support religion and the State," and generally maintain themselves with fortitude under severe trials of temper and misfortune, and "the glorious law of compensation will not fail to reward them after their deserts." A short sketch of the life of Baldassare Castiglione is given. The "Recollections of a Volunteer," "From the Wings," and "Honeymooning," form the light reading. Of course there is a reference to the great topic of the month, the general election.

Mrs. Henry Wood selects for the Argosy, in addition to the running story of "The Mysteries of Heron Dyke," a paper about Norway, by Charles W. Wood, and three tales "Verena Fontaine's Rebellion," "Between Two Stools," and "A Rose Case."

Chambers for March 27 elucidates how Mr. Fluess manages to breath under water. A short account of his experiment was given in the Herald a few weeks ago, in which it was stated he remained completely immersed in a tank for over an hour. It appears that according to Mr. Fleuss's process a continuous supply of oxygen is procured from the helmet, where it is stored in a compressed state, the supply being regulated by a valve, under the control of the diver; the original nitrogen in the lungs remain unaltered, and can be breathed over again, along with a due admixture of the oxygen. A well-known chemical action is taken advantage of to absorb the carbonic acid. It is stated that this invention will supersede the ordinary method of diving. Mr. Fluess is an officer of the mercantile marine, and was at one time in the P. and O. service.

The Churchmans most important article is one by Canon Bell, on "Attractiveness in Religious Service;" and the question, "Are our Sunday-schools a Failure?" is put, and answered in the negatived by the Rev. W. Barnet. Canon Garbett contributes an article on "The doctrine of the fathers on the Lord's Supper."

All the Year Round, Good Words, and Cassell's Magazine contain a large amount of good reading. The latter contains a paper by Mr. Munro, "From gas to electricity," suggested by experiments made regarding the electric light at the British Museum.

MINERS' WAGES IN FRANCE.—Some of the figures in the report of M. Louis Legrand on behalf of the Commission of Custom-house Tariffs with regard to the French coal trade are worth quotation. It is stated as one of the reasons for the duty on coal that, owing to the thickness of the seams in England and other causes, the cost of production of coal in France exceeds that in Great Britain. The annual average output of a miner is stated at 338 tons in England; in Prussia at 200 tons; and in France from 154 to 159 tons. It is also stated that wages have not fallen to the low level known in France prior to the general advance of eight years ago, whereas in the other countries they have so fallen. Whatever credit may be given to this statement, the rates of wages named as averaged is not accurate. The report gives the wages rate as having fallen from "9 f. per day to 5 f. per day in England, in Belgium from 7 f. to 3.50 f.;" whilst, though the exact average is not stated for France, it appears that "they have only suffered a reduction of 10 per cent." Whatever may be the state of the case in Belgium and France, the wage of the miner in Great Britain must be supposed to be in excess of the 5 f. stated; for in the last arbitration in South Yorkshire the average wage of coal-getters was stated at 6s. 3½d. per day, while that of the average of the whole of the men was put at 5s. 3d. In Northumberland the average of hewers is placed at 4s. 9d. per day; and in Durham, where the men stated that a lower wage prevails, an average wage of 4s. 6d. per day is believed to be nearer the mark. It is true that in South Wales and [illegible] lower rates of wages prevail, but in Lancashire they are higher, while the low wages of West Scotland are now being increased. It is very difficult to quote an exact average wage for the British miner; for though the averages for the different districts may be approximately obtained, yet the proportion of the output to the total needs to be borne in mind; but the probability is that such an average wage would, if obtainable, be in excess of that stated in the French report, because with the exception of South Wales, the great bulk of the output of coal is obtained from the counties in which the wage is above that given as the average.—Pall Mall Gazette.

EMBALMING THE DEAD.—Mr. Krolsman, United States Consul-General at Berlin, in his despatch to the Department of State, dated October 30, 1879, communicates a description of a newly discovered process for the preservation of dead bodies. The inventor, or discoverer, had secured a patent for the process, but the German Government, attaching great importance to the invention, induced the patentee to abandon his patent. Thereupon the Government made public, through the Press, a full description of the process. The liquid used is prepared as follows:—In 3000 grammes of boiling water are dissolved 100 grammes of alum, 25 grammes of cooking salt, 12 grammes saltpetre, 60 grammes potash, and 10 grammes arsenic acid. The solution is then allowed to cool and filter. To 10 litres of this neutral, colourless, odourless liquid 4 litres glycerine and 1 litre mettrylic alcohol are to be added. The process of preserving (or embalming) dead bodies by means of this liquid consists, as a rule, in saturating and impregnating those bodies with it. From 1½ to 5 litres of the liquid are used for a body, according to its size. The bodies prepared by this process are said to retain their form, colour, and flexibility. Even after a period of years such dead bodies may be dissected for purposes of science and criminal jurisprudence. Decay and the offensive smell of decay are completely prevented. Upon incision the muscular flesh shows the same appearance as in the case of a fresh dead body. Preparations made of the several parts, such as natural skeletons, lungs, entrails, &c., retain their softness and pliability.

For a long time past I was suffering from the breathing organs, when the idea occurred to me of using GRIMAULT and CO.'s INDIAN CIGARETTES, which procured me so great a relief that they have become indispensable to my existence.—R. SANTIAGO, Malaga.—ADV.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

The following is the address delivered by Mr. Charles Moore, F. L. S., Vice-President, Director of the Botanic Gardens, at the opening of the present session of the Royal Society:—

In addressing you this evening, I am happy in being able to congratulate my fellow members on the prosperous condition of the society, financially and otherwise, on this its fifty-ninth anniversary, i. e., if we date from the year 1821, when the first society of the kind was established by the name of the Philosophical Society; or the thirtieth annual meeting if we consider this society established in the year 1850. The society formed in 1821, as most of you have learned from a former address, had but a brief duration, arising mainly from disunion among the few members who composed it, of whom, it is sad to state, there is now not a survivor. Let us earnestly hope that the same cause will not in any way affect us, as it is very certain that if any antagonistic feelings should again arise among the members, we should soon cease to be useful as a body, and 'ere long, I fear, die out from sheer inanition. Since the re-establishment of the society in 1850, although it has undergone many vicissitudes and changed its name more than once, it has yet been continuous under some form, and the members hitherto have always been animated by a unity of spirit and good fellowship, which I earnestly hope will be continued. Of those who joined the society in 1850, Mr. R. A. Morehead and myself are now the only members who have not severed our connection with it. As will be readily imagined, the society since its establishment has not always been in a flourishing condition—it has had its seasons of success, and times of depression. Until within the last few years its greatest prosperity was from 1856 to about 1863. The income was then so much greater than the expenditure that the council were able to invest surplus funds in Government debentures to the extent of some hundreds of pounds, but a reaction took place for which it was difficult to account, and the debentures had to be sold one after the other to meet current expenses, and when the last debenture had to be realized into cash, it was gravely suggested that the best thing to do with the remaining funds was to at once pay off all liabilities, and bring the affair to an end. Fortunately this suggestion was not carried into effect. Better counsels prevailed, and fresh efforts were made to attract the attention of the more thoughtful and enlightened of our fellow-colonists, and the result has been that the society is now in possession of the fine building in which we are assembled, and a library of no mean pretensions, consisting of some of the best scientific standard works and scientific periodical literature of the day, as well as the transactions of the many learned societies with which we are now in correspondence. To what cause are we indebted for this satisfactory state of our affairs? I state it advisedly that if not wholly it is largely due to the energy displayed by our indefatigable honorary secretaries, Professor Liversidge and Dr. Liebius, both of whom have devoted a greater amount of time and labour in organizing and working out the details of the society than is generally understood. The extensive correspondence now carried on is sufficient to occupy the time of one person, but, when in addition to this, these gentlemen have to attend general meetings of the society and council, to take minutes of the proceedings of such meetings, and to make abstracts of the papers read at the ordinary general meetings, and to be in attendance here in the afternoon of each Wednesday during the session, as well as the multitudinous matters which they have to attend to in connection with the sectional and monthly meetings, a fair idea may be gained of the obligations we are under to them. It is to be regretted that so few papers were read at the general meetings during the last session, but let us hope that more vitality will be evinced in that which is now commencing. The papers read were as follows:—June 4: On the "Gem Cluster in Argo," by H. C. Russell, B.A., F.R.A.S., &c. June 4: "The International Geological Congress at Paris," by Professor Liversidge, F.G.S., &c. September 3: Lecture on "The Geology of New Zealand," by Dr. Hector, C.M.G., F.R.S., &c. October 1: "On the Languages of Australia in their connection with those of Mozambique and the South of Africa," by Hyde Clarke, Esq., V.P., Ethnological Institution. November 5: On "Photography in its relation to Popular Education," by L. W. Hart, Esq. November 5: "On Description of Fossil Leaf (Ottelia præterita), by Baron Von Mueller, K.C.M.G., F.R.S., &c. December 3: On "A Catalogue of Latitude Stars," by H. S. Hawkins, M.A. December 3: Resumé of Paper on "Some remarkable Boulders in the Hawkesbury Beds," by C. S. Wilkinson, F.G.S. December 3: "Remarks upon the Wentworth hurricane in January," by H. C. Russell, B.A., F.R.A.S. Several papers were also read at the meetings of the sections. In some of the sections there was an activity exhibited among the members which is most creditable to them. The work done, particularly in that on literature and fine arts, and in that on astronomical and microscopical matters, appear from the records to have been considerable; but very important subjects were also brought under consideration and well discussed in the chemical and other sections, and I venture to hope that in all these, during the ensuing session, there will be an equal interest taken by the members as that shown by them previously. I will make one suggestion, viz., that the work of the several sections should be confined as much as possible to practical details and conversational discussion, and that papers on any subject, excepting medical science, should be read at the monthly meetings, so that the members of the society generally may have the opportunity of discussing their merits. I cannot allow this occasion to pass without referring to the conversazione which was held in the hall of the University. It will, I think, be admitted by those who were fortunate enough to be present, that it was one of the most successful which has yet taken place. The magnificent hall, then beautifully decorated, was filled to overflowing by a brilliant assemblage of over eight hundred, most of whom appeared to be deeply interested in the numerous objects exhibited, and gratified by the explanations given by those in charge of the different exhibits, which appeared to impart much valuable information. The interest of that evening was greatly enhanced by an exhibition of photographs of New Zealand scenery, given by Dr. Hector, C.M.G., F.R.S. These were largely magnified by the limelight, and the remarks which that gentleman made, as the photographs were presented to view, were listened to with great attention and interest, and were evidently much appreciated. These conversaziones while they give great pleasure to the lady friends and relatives of members, are, nevertheless, a heavy tax upon our resources, as the expenses which have to be incurred are very considerable; but I would hope that so long as they do not trench too deeply on our funds that they will be continued. Since the close of our last session the great International Exhibition has taken place, and is now a thing of the past. It is scarcely within the province of this address to refer generally to the multitudinous natural and artificial productions which were sent to the Exhibition, but as some of the raw and manufactured vegetable products may hereafter become of great commercial importance to this colony as exports, I may be pardoned for drawing attention to a few of these. In the Court of Ceylon there were very many most interesting exhibits of this kind. It is said that on no former occasion was that wonderful plant, the cocoa-nut, so well represented as it was here. It would seem as if it produced every imaginable requirement for man's sustenance, luxury, and domestic use. Curiously enough, although this tree abounds upon islands adjoining the eastern and northern parts of this continent, it has never yet, I believe, been found growing on any portion of it, excepting where it had been placed by man's agency. It is now planted extensively in Northern Queensland. In this Court, and in that of Madras, there were some fine specimens of the barks of various kinds of Cinchonas, the genus from which the quinine alkaloid is obtained. The Cinchonas are nearly all natives of Peru, but are cultivated at such elevations, both in Ceylon and Madras, as to justify the expectation that some of the most valuable kinds may yet be grown with success in the warmer parts of this country. In these Courts the variety of teas formed a most remarkable feature. From the many kinds of these exhibited it might have been supposed that they were the produce of so many different species, instead of all being obtained from one species and its varieties. Although a comparatively new industry in Ceylon, the adaptability of the climate for the growth of the tea plant is now well established. The cultivation of this plant in India, in which country there are at least three distinct varieties, was commenced in 1837, by plants introduced from China; but the native kinds are now largely planted and are known as the "Assam," the "Cachar," and the "Moinpaar," named after the districts in which they are found in a wild state. These with the China and two or three hybrids, obtained by crossing with each other, furnished all the splendid exhibits of this kind at the Exhibition. The peculiarities of these teas as contrasted with those of China are their much greater strength, and stronger aroma. In both Ceylon and India the tea plantations are at heights varying from five to seven thousand feet above sea level, where the maximum temperature is about 69°, and the minimum temperature about 49°, the rainfall being about 49 inches. As these conditions are exactly similar to those which may be found on our Northern Coast ranges, it may be reasonably expected that at no distant period, plantations of the tea plant will occupy a great extent of the slopes of these mountain ranges, and that tea will then become one of our best products for home use, and one of the most valuable for export. There were other exhibits of this description, which it would be most advantageous to this country to procure. The most noticeable of these were the indigo, the yield of Indigofera tinctoria. Pith, a cellular substance obtained from the stem of Æschynomene aspera, and so much used in the manufacture of sun or pith hats. Tapa cloth, which is the prepared inner bark of Broussonetia papyrifera, and in the Japan Court a fine collection of the seeds of plants employed in that country for agricultural and culinary purposes. This collection has been secured by me, and their merits will be tested during the ensuing season. I would now speak of what has been done in more scientific matters:—At the Congress of geologists, held at Paris last year, Professor Liversidge was appointed vice-president for Australasia. On that occasion certain propositions were agreed to, bearing on important geological matters to be discussed in the various countries of which there were representatives present, and the result of these discussions to be reported to a meeting of geologists to be held at Bologna in 1881. Professor Liversidge, as convener for Australia, endeavoured to arrange for a meeting of geologists in Sydney during the late International Exhibition, to discuss those propositions, but failed, as it was found impossible for the geologists of each colony to meet together at that time. Under the auspices of the Paris Congress a guide to the geological and mineralogical collections was published. M. Zeiller contributed the notes on the geological collections from New South Wales, sent by the Department of Mines. M. Zeiller, judging from the plant fossils, affirms the mesozoic age of our coal beds, notwithstanding the occurrence of Glossopteris and Phyllotheca, in the carboniferous beds, as exhibited in specimen 96, which he supposes came from the upper coal measure; but Mr. Wilkinson, F.G.S., our Geological Surveyor, informs me that he himself obtained this specimen from the Anvil Creek coal seam. The association of these plants with palæozoic marine fossils in this locality has also been most clearly demonstrated by the late Rev. W. B. Clarke, in his fourth edition of "Remarks on the Sedimentary Formations," which valuable work was specially dedicated to this congress of geologists; also, in the magnificent collection exhibited at the recent Exhibition by the Department of Mines. Other specimens of Glossopteris from the Greta pit were shown, which were obtained by the late Mr. Clarke. From this evidence it is somewhat surprising that M. Zeiller should have called in question the palæozoic age of the Glossopteris and Phyllotheca. The occurrence of gold in some serpentine rocks, which also contain veins of asbestos, near Gundagai, was communicated to the society at one of the monthly meetings last session by Mr. Wilkinson, who attaches much importance to the discovery as being likely to lead to the finding of workable gold deposits in other localities, where the auriferous drifts have evidently been derived from the disintegration of serpentine rocks. Mr. Wilkinson also brought under the notice of the society the occurrence of some remarkable boulders of shale in the Hawkesbury formation. These boulders, from their angular shape and the singular manner in which they have been embedded in irregular and scattered heaps in the sandstone, suggest that their mode of disposition has been partly due to glacial action. Mr. W. J. Stephens, M.A., recently communicated to the Linnæan Society of this colony the result of similar observations made by him when examining the Hawkesbury rocks in the Southern district, thus supporting Mr. Wilkinson's views. I may add that the fossil plants which occur in the shale beds are in an exceptionally good state of preservation. It is also gratifying to me to be able to state that the late Rev. W. B. Clarke's valuable geological map will be shortly published by the Department of Mines. In astronomical matters the year now closed has not been marked by any great or startling event; but steady work has been done in the colony, by our astronomer, Mr. H. C. Russell, B.A., F.R.A.S., and by Mr. J. Tebbutt, F.R.A.S., in determining star places, measuring double stars, and observations of the planets and the two comets which have appeared; the last one, of unusual brilliance, was almost concealed by clouds, and its great tail, some forty degrees long, excited a lively curiosity, which could not be gratified because of the impossibility of seeing the nucleus. One event has transpired in connection with astronomy since last we met which takes us back to the birth of our society, for the Parramatta Observatory was founded at the same time, and there can, I think, be little doubt that it was the presence amongst the founders of a Governor known to be a friend of science which induced them to found the society. Sir Thomas Macdougall Brisbane had brought out with him an astronomer (Mr. Charles Rumker), and assistant (Mr. James Dunlop), together with a complete equipment for an observatory; and very soon after landing, in November, 1821, he had the building commenced close to his own residence, so that he might superintend and actually take a share in the Observatory work. The building was 27 feet on each side, and only one story high, and had a flat roof, sometimes used for a place from which to observe. There were two domes, 12 feet in diameter; and the instruments consisted of a 5½-feet transit instrument, by Traughton; a two-feet mural circle, by the same artist; a 16-inch repeating circle, by Reichenbach; a 46-inch achromatic telescope, on equatorial stand, by Banks; a clock by Hardy, and another by Bregnet. All these were carefully placed, and a great many observations taken, which formed the basis of a catalogue of 7000 stars, and several papers published in the "Philosophical Transactions," 1828 and 1829. Mr. Runker left the colony in 1829, and Mr. Dunlop was appointed in his place, a position which he held until the Observatory was dismantled, in about 1841. After the instruments were removed the building was allowed to fall into decay, and at one time there was a prospect that even its site would be lost. In 1875, however, Mr. Farnell, M.L.A., got £150 placed on the Estimates and voted, for the purpose of erecting a monument to mark the site of the old Observatory, and during the past year the obelisk, a handsome grained white marble one, has been completed under the direction of the trustees appointed, viz., Messrs. J. S. Farnell, M.L.A., James Barnet (Colonial Architect), and H. C. Russell (Government Astronomer). The inscription on it reads:—"An Astronomical Observatory was founded here May 2, 1822, by Sir Thomas Macdougall Brisbane, K.C.B., Governor of New South Wales." This obelisk was erected in 1880 to mark the site of the transit instrument in that Observatory. In meteorology the field is so wide that I will not attempt a sketch of what has been done generally. Suffice it to remark that in our own colony a steady advance has been made; the number of observing stations is steadily increased, and now amounts to 152, and the great majority of additional observers are found in the interior, so filling up space which has been a complete blank to the meteorologist; and the statistics now collected are of the utmost value for the present and future investigation of our climate. The rain map for 1879 has added to it a diagram shewing the state of the inland rivers during the year, so that the effect of the rains can be traced in the rivers. I must not forget to mention that, owing to Mr. Russell's exertions, a meteorological conference was called together by the Government, and met at the Observatory. The report has been published, and contains important suggestions and arrangements for the study of the meteorology of Australia generally. Amongst minor matters should be mentioned the completion at the Observatory of a new recording instrument, which writes on a small sheet of paper, 19 inches by 8 inches, a complete record of every change in the thermometer, the barometer, the direction and force of wind, and the rain, in fact it is a complete meteorological observatory in itself. To my excellent and most learned friend, Baron von Mueller, K.C.M.G., great praise is due for his indefatigable labours in working out the botany of this continent. In addition to the large share which he had in the publication of the "Flora Australiensis," a work which in itself is a monument of patient industry, and preeminent ability, he has lately published a valuable atlas of the genus Eucalyptus of which six decades have been received by me. This is of the utmost importance to botanists, as the elaborate plates contain figures of the leaves, flowers, and fruits of the species which have been referred to. The sections given of the flower and fruit, and the descriptive letter-press, are such as to enable any one with slight botanical knowledge to determine with ease the particular species described. The Baron has also accumulated considerable additional material for a continuance or supplement of the flora. Much of this has been attained by the collections made by Mr. Alexander Forest, during his last exploring expedition through North-west Australia, and by Mr. John Forest, during that gentleman's triangulation of the back country of Nichol Bay. From this last collection we learn the astonishing fact that out of upwards of four hundred species which it contains there is not a single orchid amongst them. The Baron's report of the forest resources of Western Australia, of which there is a copy in the library of this society, is a valuable contribution to our knowledge of the vegetable economical resources of that colony, and as a labour of love that gentleman has published, at his own expense, an index to the first edition of the "Species Plantarum" of Linnæus. This work was published in 1753, and is exceedingly rare, and the index will be the more valuable as it is from the second edition of that published in 1762 and 1763 that quotations are made in the more recent descriptive works on botany. I would also refer to the botanical researches of Mr. Bailey, F.L.S., of Brisbane, who has done much, under considerable difficulties, in investigating the botanical resources of Queensland. His works on the grasses and ferns of that colony are most creditable and highly interesting productions; and in an address recently delivered by that distinguished geologist and naturalist, the Rev. J. E. Tenison Woods, F.G. and L.S., we learn that Mr. Bailey is now engaged in working up the lower order of the Australian flora. I must also advert to and award my tribute of praise to the ability and research displayed by Mr. R. D. Fitzgerald, our Deputy Surveyor-General, in the publication of his work on Australian orchids. When it is considered that this gentleman, during the time unoccupied by his public duties, has furnished with his own hand carefully and accurately drawn figures of the complete plant, and sections of all parts of the flower, and has given an excellent diagnosis of all the species which he has so beautifully illustrated, a some faint idea may be formed of the industry required in carrying out so far this very valuable work. While making this brief and very imperfect reference to what has been, and is being, accomplished in botanical pursuits, I may be pardoned in drawing attention to the very great necessity which now and has long existed of ascertaining the uses and economic value of the Australian flora. The knowledge which we possess of the properties of the greater number of the plants of the colony is most imperfect. How little, for instance, is known of the value of what are termed the salt bushes of this country. It is believed, and with good reason, that this class of plants possesses a medicinal property of great advantage to sheep, which not only relish but fatten on this food, particularly in seasons of drought. It has not been determined which are the most valuable of these plants, a list of which is herewith appended. It is generally considered that of these Atriplex halimoides and Atriplex vesicaria are the best, but these are only found in certain localities—those called cotton bushes, Kochia aphylla and Kochia villosa, and also Chenopodium nitrariaceum, as well as others, afford excellent pasturage, but this is all that is really known of these most interesting and useful plants. The same remarks which have been made respecting these plants may be applied to the grasses of this country. Although the names and affinities of these have been botanically determined, we have yet very much to learn as regards the comparative nutritive value which these individually possess. An attempt has been made by Baron von Mueller to fix accurately the per-centage of albumen, gluten, starch, gum, sugar, and fibre of the best of these, as compared with the best kinds of English grasses; but this attempt has not been brought to a satisfactory conclusion, as the different kinds experimented on have not yet been obtained at different stages of development and from various soils, so that the mean of different analyses may be taken. This is a most praiseworthy effort on the part of the Baron, and it is well worth imitating, by some of our practical chemists; but however valuable the information derived in this way may be, we must look to the occupants or owners of our sheep and cattle runs to practically learn the real value of these plants. Observations of this kind should be based upon some intelligent principle, and it should be carefully noticed the kind of situation, whether low or high, dry or damp, and the nature of the soil in which the different species succeed best, whether early or late in flowering, and the kind of stock that fatten best by feeding upon them. In very many parts of the colony, particularly on sheep runs, a good number of the best grasses have been entirely destroyed by being too closely eaten down, for instance the well-known kangaroo grass, Anthistiria Australis, originally the most generally distributed and most valuable native grass, almost wholly disappears on sheep runs, while on country stocked with cattle it thickens and improves in quality. During the past season I have had collections of grasses sent to me from the Darling and other partially or wholly unstocked parts of the country. Many of the most luxuriant and nutritive of these were general in former times in the more settled parts of the southern and western districts, but which, from the causes alluded to, are now rarely to be found. It is the native grasses that we must, I think, depend on to form our permanent pastures, as hitherto, with very few exceptions, the introduced plants of this class have failed, or only partially succeeded. Of these, so far as I am aware, the only permanent kinds are buffalo grass (Stenotaphrum glabrum), the couch of colonists (Cynodon dactylon), and perhaps the American prairie grass (Bromus Schraderii), which grows well in all parts of the colony, while the two former will only flourish within the coast range. I would also urge on our stock owners the importance of making careful observations relative to the value which may be attached to other kinds of fodder plants, so that on well-founded grounds the growth of the more durable and fattening kinds may be encouraged and those of poorer character allowed to die out. For some years back various species of Eucalypts growing thickly over extensive areas extending from Camden southwards have been dying off, and in a manner so regular as to appear to have been caused by human agency. From the repeated examinations which I have made of localities where this singular phenomenon has occurred, the only hypothesis which I can arrive at is, that the trees have been destroyed by fungus at the roots. In this conclusion I am borne out by the fact that the trees do not die over any large area simultaneously, but become affected in the first instance on one particular spot, and gradually die off, usually in a direction from north to south, and in belts of more or less width, leaving those growing on either side of such belts entirely unaffected, for which no reason has yet been satisfactorily assigned. If it be a fungus which thus destroys these trees, the question arises why it does not spread laterally, instead of proceeding in one direction; and to this I have no answer to give. It is certain that on the roots of the dead trees a minute fungus of a whitish colour has been observed, but a similar fungus growth is common on the roots of other dead trees which have perished by decay. The investigation of this subject is one to be commended to every man of intelligence who may have the opportunity of inquiring into it. My attention has of late been frequently drawn to another strange occurrence, very different from the last, but almost as difficult to explain. Over many parts of the country lying between the Lachlan and the Murray Rivers a species of Frenela, Mirb., locally called pine, is spreading so rapidly and so thickly as to seriously affect the grazing capabilities of station property generally. This tree bears cones, having small seeds, somewhat angular in shape and hard in substance, but not at all likely to be carried about by the agency of birds or animals of any kind. The country over which it is spreading so fast and in such profusion has long been occupied as sheep and cattle stations, but until the last few years no great increase of the tree had been noticed. As this new growth cannot have had a spontaneous existence, it can only be supposed that the seeds have been lying in the ground for a long and indefinite period. This is the only explanation which I can offer for the very extraordinary manner in which this tree is spreading. It is not one, I must admit, quite satisfactory to myself, as, unlike seeds of certain Acacias, those of Callitris readily vegetate when placed in the earth, nor does it appear that the ground has undergone any unusual change to cause the seeds to germinate. As yet absolutely nothing has been done in this colony towards re-foresting any part of this country, and it is no easy matter to suggest a practicable plan by which this most desirable object could be accomplished. Valuable reserves have been made, however, in many well-timbered parts of the country, under the care and supervision of public officials. These reserves will preserve many excellent kinds of trees from being recklessly wasted, and most useful hereafter as a means of supplying seeds and plants of our best kinds of trees for the purpose of planting out future forests in the adjoining or other districts in situations where they may be expected to succeed. It is much to be regretted that reserves of this description were not made at an earlier period, for, had this been done, we should not have had to lament the loss and destruction of a class of vegetation as rich in numbers of species and as luxuriant in growth as can be found in any part of the world: I refer to the coast jungle forest extending from Shoalhaven in the south to the northern extremities of the colony, which for the most part has been cleared. A quarter of a century ago the beautiful district of Illawarra, which is about forty miles south of Sydney, was clothed with a dense mass of trees, shrubs, &c., with a foliage as rich and varied in appearance as could be found in any tropical country; and now, alas! with one especial exception of about forty acres, nearly the whole of this magnificent vegetation has been destroyed, and the country turned into grazing paddocks. This especial exception is the property of a coal company, which fortunately has preserved the surface in its primitive condition, and on which can still be seen gorgeous masses of two different kinds of palms, called, locally, the bangalow and cabbage-tree palms; known botanically as Seaforthia elegans, and Corypha Australis. These, with three or four kinds of tree-ferns, viz.:—Alsophila Cooperii, Alsophila Australis, Alsophila Macarthurii, and Dicksonia antarctica, and many climbing plants, and a dense undergrowth overtopped by species of Ficus, Eucalypts, and other tall trees, the trunks and branches of which are often clothed with an abundance of stags-horn fern (Platycerium alcicorne) and birds-nest ferns (Asplenium nidus) and other similar plants, present to the eye a scene of beauty perhaps unequally beyond the tropics. To the owners of this beautiful property the thanks of the community is due for preserving from destruction this now nearly the only remaining portion of the glorious natural vegetation, which originally characterized the greater part of this lovely district. It may be assumed with some degree of certainty that within the last quarter of a century, from natural decay, ring-barking and clearing for cultivation, at least one-half of the timbered land of this country has been denuded of its forest vegetation. Looking at this fact from the point of view that climatic changes are largely affected by adding to or destroying to any considerable extent the forests of a country, it might have been expected that ere this time a very considerable diminution of our rainfall would have been experienced, but it is certain that this has not been the case, as statistics rather tend to show the reverse, nor have our principal rivers been diminished in volume of water. In support of this statement, I received from the Colonial Astronomer the accompanying diagram and letter:—

"I send you herewith diagram showing by vertical lines the rainfall for each year. For instance, the rainfall of 1840 was 48 inches, and is shown by the line under that year coming up to 48 inches, so on for each year. The straight horizontal line shows the mean of 40 years, and the short red lines show the means in periods of 5 years. You will at once see that the rainfall of the first 20 years was less than the second 20 years, for in the first 20 three of the red lines are below the mean, and one above; while in the second 20 three red lines are above the mean, and one below. I have thought of several ways of showing what you want, but this seems to be the best. Actual amounts in figures are also given. Lake George furnishes a good index of our seasons, when found, in 1820, it was very full; then it dried up, and now it has more water than ever before. If you look at page 182 of my book on the climate, a copy of which I think you have (if not I will send one), you will find some notes about Lake George, which will interest you, re changes of climate.
"Yours very truly,
"H. C. RUSSELL."

Our late lamented vice-president, the Rev. W. B. Clarke, read a most able paper on this subject shortly before his death, tending to show the good results as regards moisture and temperature which had arisen from planting trees in various countries. I am not now about to dispute the conclusions arrived at in that paper, but as a rule in discussing this matter too little consideration is given to the effect of natural agencies. There cannot be a doubt that the climate, rainfall, and vegetation of a country are all more or less influenced by geographical position. For instance, the average thermometer range of Western Australia is very similar indeed to that of this colony; yet how very different is the vegetation. Here, within our coast ranges, moist, densely-wooded jungle forests prevail, in which a great profusion of ferns and several kinds of palms abound; there, for the most part, very little is to be seen but an apparently parched-up small-growing description of scrub, in which there is but very little trace of ferns. This remarkable difference in the coast flora of these two countries is wholly due to position and climate, for although the temperature of both places is almost identical, the rainfall is double in the former to what it is in the latter. The jungle forests, as I understand the term jungle to mean trees, shrubs, and climbing plants, and undergrowth intermingled into a dense mass, could not exist in so dry a country as Western Australia. It follows that there are natural laws which govern the rainfall of a country, and to alter these to any very appreciable extent is beyond the power of man. This opinion I know is a debatable one, and I shall be very pleased if any fellow member will take the subject up and endeavour to prove that I am in error. If the inference which I have drawn be correct, the partial destruction of our forests, present or future, will not alter to any great degree the rainfall or temperature of this climate. I must now trespass on your patience for some minutes while I say a few words relative to certain views advocated by the illustrious Darwin in his work on "Insectivorous Plants." The opinions held by this auther on this subject, and so powerfully enforced in the work referred to, have been accepted by very many of the most distinguished naturalists of the present day, and it may seem somewhat presumptuous in me to question some of the conclusions arrived at, but when any man, however great, ascends into the realm of uncertainty for arguments in support of his theory, he cannot be astonished at any effort which may be made to controvert them. I am in the unhappy position of being unable to acquiesce in the doctrine that the plants termed insectivorous, or those that are said to derive their nourishment from animal matter captured through the agency of their leaves, were intended by nature to depend on, or benefit by any such means for their support. Darwin does not claim to have originated this idea—it is in fact a very old one. In some of the early illustrated botanical works figures are given representing insects caught by the leaves of some of these plants. In the Botanical Magazine of 1804, there is an illustration of Dionæa muscipula,—the Venus fly-trap—showing a fly compressed between the lobes of its leaf, and of this there is a sketch on the table. That the leaves of this plant are sensitive, and the lobes will close upon each other by irritating the glandular hairs on the inner surface, is beyond doubt. In early days it was a favourite amusement of mine to test the irritability of these leaves, and to place flies upon them for nourishment; but the invariable effect of this was, if often repeated, to destroy the leaf and injure the plant, and of the many similar experiments which I have seen reported in the press as tried by practical cultivators I cannot recollect an instance which had resulted in success. Then as regards the Droseras, or sundews, several species of which are to be found growing around Sydney, there is no sufficient evidence adduced here or elsewhere to show that these plants derive any benefit from nitrogenous or animal matter under natural conditions. It is true that insects are often found caught by the tentacles, or glandular hairs, with which the leaves of these plants are clothed, but I have for many years past sought for proof of their animal-devouring properties, by examining them under all kinds of circumstances and in every possible situation, but all my investigations have failed to afford me the slightest grounds for believing that they absorb and assimilate nitrogenous matter as food. These plants seldom grow far apart, but are usually associated in masses, the smaller species on moist banks, and the comparatively large one, Drosera dichotoma, in marshy places: the last may be seen in profusion in the water reserve, and some of the former kinds on the North Shore, so that those who are curious about this subject have ample opportunities of judging for themselves; and if any unprejudiced observer will examine these plants, he will find, particularly among the smaller species, some with insects attached, but the great majority without a vestige of animal life about them; but in either case I can with confidence predict that he will not detect any difference in growth. This may seem a very summary way of disposing of this question, which has been so ably worked out by Darwin, who has shown that the glands of both the Dionæa and the Droseras have the power of secreting a viscid fluid, which, like the gastric juice of animals, has strong antiseptic properties capable of dissolving raw meat, and that they can absorb soluble nitrogenous matter, which is in itself a powerful argument in favour of the view that these plants prey upon insects. It is a plausible theory, but I a convinced a mistaken one. I have been induced to mention this last subject, as it was one not long since debated at one of the sectional meetings of this society, on which occasion very contradictory opinions were expressed in regard to the views of Darwin.

LORD BEACONSFIELD as he APPEARED BEFORE 1837.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Some time before 1837—the exact date I have no means at this moment of ascertaining—N. P. Willis, the American poet, was travelling in England. While there he was invited to a party at Lady Blessington's, at which, amongst others, were Lord Durham and Benjamin Disraeli. The publication of "Vivian Grey" and other writings had made young Disraeli a celebrity at this early period, and Lord Durham was regarded as on the high road to the Premiership. In 1840 Willis published his "Letters from under a Bridge," and in one of them he describes these two eminent personages—the one young, brilliant, and ambitious; the other, apparently, on all but the highest rung of the political ladder. The poet ventured to predict (in 1837) that "the Viceroy (Lord Durham) would be Premier, but it is questionable if the author of 'Vivian Grey' does more than carry out the moral of his own tale." "In a great crisis," he adds, "with the nation in a tempest, Disraeli would flash across the darkness very finely; but he will never do for the calm right hand of a Premier." How strange it must have appeared to the writer of this opinion, who died only a year ago, to have seen Disraeli for thirty years the leader of the great Conservative party in the House of Commons, and for five years, as such leader, one of the most powerful Prime Ministers who ever wielded the destinies of England! The brilliant talker and novelist, whom the poet thought unqualified even to be "the calm right hand of a Premier," became the effective right hand of Lord Derby, and afterwards his successor, in which character he raised the prestige of his country to a higher pitch than it had reached since the days of the great Lord Chatham. However, here is what Willis published of him forty years ago, and very curious and interesting I think it is. Yours, &c.,

M.

"By the way, to answer your questions while I think of it, that is the reason why I am not at Niagara, 'taking a look at the viceroy.' I must watch my turnip-ling. I met Lord D—— once or twice when in London, and once at dinner at Lady B——'s. I was excessively interested on that occasion by the tactics of D'I——, who had just then chipped his political shell, and was anxious to make an impression on Lord D——, whose glory, still to come, was confidently foretold in that bright circle. I rather fancy the dinner was made to give Vivian Grey the chance; for her ladyship, benevolent to every one, has helped D'I—— to 'imp his wing,' with a devoted friendship, of which he should embody in his maturest work the delicacy and fervour. Women are glorious friends to stead ambition; but, effective as they all can be, few have the tact, and fewer the varied means, of the lady in question. The guests dropped in, announced but unseen, in the dim twilight; and, when Lord D—— came, I could only see that he was of middle stature, and of a naturally cold address. B—— spoke to him, but he was introduced to no one—a departure from the custom of that maison sans-gêne, which was either a tribute to his lordship's reserve or a ruse on the part of Lady B——, to secure to D'I—the advantage of having his acquaintance sought—successful, if so; for Lord D——, after dinner, requested a formal introduction to him. But for D'O——, who sparkles, as he does everything else, out of rule, and in splendid defiance of others' dulness, the soup and first half-hour of dinner would have passed off with the usual English fashion of earnest silence. I looked over my spoon at the future Premier, a dark, saturnine man, with very black hair, combed very smooth, and wondered how a heart, with the turbulent ambitions, and disciplined energies which were stirring, I knew, in his, could be concealed under that polished and marble tranquillity of mien and manner. He spoke to Lady B—— in an under-tone, replying, with a placid serenity that never reached a smile, to so much of D'O——'s champagne wit as threw its sparkle in his way, and B—— and D'I—— were silent altogether. I should have foreboded a dull dinner if, in the open brow, the clear sunny eye, and unembarrassed repose of the beautiful and expressive mouth of Lady B——, I had not read the promise of a change. It came presently. With a tact, of which the subtle ease and grace can in no way be conveyed into description, she gathered up the cobweb threads of conversation going on at different parts of the table, and, by the most apparent accident, flung them into D'I——'s fingers like the ribands of a four-in-hand. And, if so coarse a figure can illustrate it, he took the whip-hand like a master. It was an appeal to his opinion on a subject he well understood, and he burst at once, without preface, into that fiery vein of eloquence, which, hearing many times after, and always with new delight, have stamped D'I—— on my mind as the most wonderful talker I have ever had the fortune to meet. He is anything but a declaimer. You would never think him on stilts. If he catches himself in a rhetorical sentence, he mocks at it in the next breath. He is satirical, contemptuous, pathetic, humorous, everything in a moment; and his conversation, on any subject whatever, embraces the omnibus rebus, et quibusdam aliis. Add to this that D'I——'s is the most intellectual face in England—pale, regular, and overshadowed with the most luxuriant masses of raven-black hair; and you will scarce wonder that, meeting him for the first time, Lord D—— was (as he was expected to be by the Aspasia of that London Academe) impressed. He was not carried away as we were. That would have been unlike Lord D——. He gave his whole mind to the brilliant meteor blazing before him; but the telescope of judgment was in his hand—to withdraw at pleasure. D'I—— and he formed at the moment a finely-contrasted picture. Understanding his game perfectly, the author deferred, constantly and adroitly, to the opinion of his noble listener, shaped his argument by his suggestions, allowed him to say nothing without using it as the nucleus of some new turn to his eloquence, and all this with an apparent effort against it, as if he had desired to address himself exclusively to Lady B——, but was compelled, by a superior intellectual magnetism, to turn aside and pay homage to her guest. With all this instinctive management, there was a flashing abandon in his language and choice of illustration, a kindling of his eye, and, what I have before described, a positive foaming of his lips, which, contrasted with the warm but clear and penetrating eye of Lord D——, his calm yet earnest features, and lips closed without compression, formed, as I said, a picture, and of an order worth remembering in poetry. Without meaning any disrespect to D'I——, whom I admire as much as any man in England, I remarked to my neighbour, a celebrated artist, that it would make a glorious drawing of Satan tempting an arch-angel to rebel.

"Well, D'I—— is in Parliament, and Lord D—— on the last round but one of the ladder of subject greatness. The viceroy will be Premier, no doubt; but it is questionable if the author of Vivian Grey does more than carry out the moral of his own tale. Talking at a brilliant-table, with an indulgent and superb woman on the watch for wit and eloquence, and rising in the face of a cold common-sense House of Commons on the look-out for froth and humbug, are two different matters. In a great crisis, with the nation in a tempest, D'I—— would flash across the darkness very finely—but he will never do for the calm right-hand of a Premier. I wish him, I am sure, every success in the world; but I trust that whatever political reverses fall to his share, they will drive him back to literature."

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—FRIDAY, MAY 28.

SITTINGS FOR CAUSES.

Banco Court.—(Before his Honor Sir WILLIAM MANNING and a jury of four.)

GOGERLY V. YORK.

Jury: James Al..., Samuel Benjamin, J. Hy. Mulholland, and Peter Greig.

Mr. Pilcher, instructed by Messrs. Pigott and Trickett, appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. Davis, instructed by Mr. S. C. Brown, appeared for the defendant.

This was an action brought by Charles Gogerly to recover damages from Charles York for trespassing on the plaintiff's lands, at Port Hacking, and pulling down the houses thereon, and removing the materials thereof, and carrying away barns, timber, fences, and other erections, and destroying certain fruit trees growing thereon. In other counts damages were claimed for trespass to, and for the conversion of the materials of the buildings, and also of a quantity of household furniture and tools. £2000 was claimed. The defendant pleaded: 1, Not guilty; 2, the lands were not the plaintiff's; 3, the goods were not the plaintiff's.

The plaintiff's case was that he was possessed of, and prior to 1874 used to occupy, a dwelling-house at Port Hacking, where he owned two blocks of land of 20 acres and 22 acres respectively, the latter of which adjoined a piece of land of 10 acres, formerly the property of Mr. T. Lord; all of the blocks had frontages to the waters of Port Hacking: the plaintiff, with his family, dwelt in a cottage erected on the 10 acres, and on the other blocks had a dwelling-house partly built, a barn, a tool house, a wharf, and fences; also an orchard and other improvements; in 1874, he then suffering from ill-health, moved to Sydney, and took up his residence with a daughter living at Newtown. Two of his daughters were left at Port Hacking for a few months. They also came to Sydney and left their former dwelling-house locked up, and all of the improvements standing. Two of them returned in 1875 to inspect the place, and found it altogether devastated. Their dwelling-house had been destroyed, the materials removed, the new house in course of erection was demolished, and the timber taken away. As they were coming near to the remains of the farm, they being on the water rowing themselves, they saw the defendant, with some men, removing some of the fruit trees and timber into a punt, which he had alongside of the wharf and which he afterwards towed away towards his own place. The plaintiff and two of his daughters afterwards went to the defendant's place, which also was on the waters of Port Hacking, and complained of what had been done. The defendant admitted that he had removed some of the stones from the old building which had been upon Mr. Lord's land, and had built them into an out-house. As to the other matters he denied all knowledge. A mass of evidence was given of the value of the portable property and buildings erected on the land. The defendant's case was that, with Mr. Lord's permission, he removed some of the stones which had been portion of a chimney of a hut on his (Lord's) property, and also some saplings and one piece of squared timber; beyond those things he knew nothing about the plaintiff's property, and the whole place had been abandoned, and was opened to any person who might wish to use waste it. The things said to have been removed were of no value to him. It also appeared that the plaintiff had purchased Lord's land.

The evidence was very contradictory as to the value of the goods, and as to what the defendant had done when he removed the stones and saplings.

After counsels' addresses to the jury, his HONOR left the case to them, on the credibility of the witnesses.

The jury, after retiring, returned a verdict for the plaintiff, with damages £600.

HAYES V. THE COMMISSIONER FOR RAILWAYS.

Jury: Messrs. Charles Momberg, Sloman Friedman, Edward Leist, and M. Goulston.

Mr. Pilcher and Mr. Dawson, instructed by Mr. G. E. Russell Jones, appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C., and Mr. C. B. Stephen, instructed by the Crown Solicitor, appeared for the defendant.

This was an action brought by Alfred Hayes, to recover £1000 damages from the Government, as compensation for injuries received in a railway accident at the Parramatta station last Boxing Day. The defendant pleaded: 1. Not guilty, but admitted the negligence. The only question for the jury was to assess the damages.

The plaintiff's case was that he was a carpenter, and was earning £3 a week before last Boxing Day, when he went to the Parramatta races with some friends by railway. They were about to return in the afternoon, and had taken their seats in a second-class carriage, portion of a train standing at the station alongside the platform ready to go to Sydney. The carriage was full, and was near the tail of the train. The plaintiff had not long taken his seat when some one called out "Jump up for your lives." The plaintiff remembered nothing more till the next day, when he awoke and found himself in bed in his own place in Surry Hills. He then was suffering from pain in his head and neck, and was prevented from going to work for two months, and then had to go, although he was not well, as he had to support a widowed mother and two sisters. Since the accident he had not been in the same state as he was before. In addition to a pain in the head he was nervous and was unable to stand the ...

In cross-examination it was shown that after the accident to the train the plaintiff was taken to the hospital at Parramatta, and there was found by his friends, after some time, talking to a warder in a rambling style. He walked back to the train, and after coming to Sydney walked home to Bourke-street. He was a sober man, though at times had taken a glass too much, and some weeks before the accident had been tipsy, and had cut his face. The day after the accident the plaintiff was examined by his lodge doctor, and was found to be suffering from concussion of the brain; he had no outward signs of injury. Concussion of the brain frequently led to permanent injury of the brain.

For the defence, Dr. Roberts had examined the plaintiff on the 26th of January, and he (the Doctor) was satisfied that the plaintiff had suffered no serious nervous injury; and evidence was given by a witness who had lived with the plaintiff of the plaintiff's habits, and that in a tipsy fit he had fallen over the kerbstone and cut his eye, and that on the night of the accident the plaintiff had eaten a hearty supper.

Counsel did not address the jury.

His HONOR, in directing the jury, stated that they had only to assess the amount which would be fair and reasonable compensation to the plaintiff for the injuries received.

The jury, after retiring for a few minutes, assessed the damages at £100.

Jury Court.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice WINDEYER and a jury of four.)

LOVE V. CORREY.

This was an undefended action for goods sold and delivered, brought by James Robinson Love against John Nicholas Correy. The defendant pleaded never indebted, but on May 5th he wrote to the plaintiff from Carcoar admitting the justness of his claim, which he intended to pay as soon as he was able to do so.

Mr. Simpson, instructed by Messrs. Holdsworth and Evans, appeared for the plaintiff, for whom a verdict was given for the amount claimed, £84 9s. 3d.

TOOTH AND ANOTHER V. COTTLE.

Jury: Messrs. William Kippax, William Napier, William Oliffe, and John Cutter.

Mr. Dawson, instructed by Messrs. Dawson and Son, appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr. Want, instructed by Mr. Hellyer, appeared for the defendant.

This was an action brought by Messrs. Tooth and Co. to recover from Elizabeth Cottle the price of goods sold and delivered. The defendant pleaded that she was a married woman. The plaintiffs replied that the defendant had obtained a Judge's order under the Deserted Wives and Children's Act, whereby her personal property was protected from her husband and his creditors. After the case had been opened some difficulty arose about proving the order, and the trial was postponed till next sittings, on the payment of the costs of the day.

HUNT V. MOORE.

This was an action brought by John Horbury Hunt to recover from John Moore, representing the committee of the Armidale Hospital, £225 as commission in connection with the Armidale Hospital.

Mr. Simpson and Dr. Sly, instructed by Messrs. Stephen, Lawrence, and Jaques, appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. Darley, Q.C., and Mr. Rogers, instructed by Mr. Simpson, of Armidale (by his agents, Messrs. Foster and Dale), appeared for the defendant.

The case was amicably settled, the defendant agreeing to give up all the plans and drawings in connection with the hospital to the plaintiff, and to pay him £25, without costs. A verdict was accordingly entered for £25.

M'BEAN V. KENNEDY.

This was an action in replevin. The issues were between Donald M'Bean and Kate Kennedy.

The plaintiff sued the defendant for damages for an illegal distress. The defendant set up that the distress was for rent due. The plaintiff denied that he was tenant to the plaintiff, or that any rent was due.

On his HONOR's suggestion the case was settled.

It appeared that M'Bean had been in possession of the premises for about 18 years without paying rent, and in 1879 agreed to pay a small weekly rent to the defendant. There was some question whether that agreement was not made under some misconception.

After consultation the parties agreed that a verdict should be entered for the defendant without costs, all the back rent to be cancelled, the plaintiff to attorn as a weekly tenant to the defendant at a rental of 2s. per week, to commence from next Monday.

Mr. Want, instructed by Mr. G. M. Dunn, appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. Rogers, instructed by Messrs. Ellis and Makinson, appeared for the defendant.

MURRAY AND WIFE V. HARRIS AND ANOTHER.

This was an action brought by Elizabeth Murray and James Murray to recover the possession of a title-deed detained by Messrs. Harris and Ackmann.

It was admitted that the defendants had advanced to Messrs. Hardy and Murray (trading as Hardy, Brothers) a sum of £4468, secured by a bill of sale over their stock; collateral security was also given by Mrs. Elizabeth Murray in the form of a mortgage over some property at Manly. The defendants realized on their bill of sale, and obtained sufficient to pay themselves off, and nothing was now due. On behalf of Mrs. Murray a formal demand was made for the return of the deed, and was not complied with. It was then agreed that the legal rights of the parties should be left to the Full Court.

A nominal verdict for the plaintiff for 40s. was entered, the defendants undertaking to deliver up the deeds if the Full Court should hold that they were not entitled to hold them; the defendants to have leave to move the Court to enter a verdict for them if they were entitled to hold the deeds.

Mr. Want and Dr. Donovan, instructed by Mr. G. M. Dunn, appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C., and Mr. Darley, Q.C., instructed by Mr. D. L. Levy, appeared for the defendants.

THE BANK OF NEW SOUTH WALES V. NESBITT.

On this case being called on, and no one appearing for the plaintiffs, they were nonsuited. Mr. Want, instructed by Messrs. Steven, Laurence, and Jaques, appeared for the defendant.

In Equity.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice HARGRAVE.)

His HONOR disposed of some ex parte matters.

CAMERON AND OTHERS V. LEE AND OTHERS.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

At the Bath Arms Hotel, corner of Parramatta and Burwood Roads, yesterday afternoon, the City Coroner held an inquest upon the body of a boy named Herbert Hynes. From the evidence adduced, it appears that the deceased was the son of Mr. Allan Hynes, of Longbottom, and aged about 6 years. At about a quarter to 6 on Thursday night deceased and his sister (15 years old) went to a well on their parents' premises to get some water, when the former tripped and fell into the well; the sister immediately went to the house and reported the circumstance, but it was five or six minutes before assistance could be procured. The body was then taken up, and every effort was made by the father and others to restore animation, but in vain. About a quarter of an hour afterwards Dr. Scales took similar measures, but they were attended with no better success. Dr. Scales had made a post-mortem examination of the remains, and found the cause of death to be asphyxia from drowning. The jury returned a verdict in accordance with his testimony.

ALASKA.—It is proposed to set up up a Territorial Government for Alaska, with all the machinery required by a populous region. The total white population is but about 250. There is reason to suppose that somebody or other must be looking for an opportunity to get a living at the expense of the United States Government. Captain George W. Bailey has visited every settlement worthy of the name in Alaska, and made a census of their inhabitants. In October, 1879, there were, as stated above, less than 250 white persons in the whole of Alaska; in addition to these there were 2000 half-breeds, 2500 Aleuts, and 4500 Indians. Most of the savage and semi-civilized residents of Alaska are scattered along a line of 2000 miles long, on barren islands and a rocky coast, where fish and oil are almost the sole articles of food. In the southern portion of Alaska are two settlements—Sitka and Wrangel—which contain very nearly all the whites. "In no other village of that vast region," says a gentleman thoroughly acquainted with the country, "can a sufficient number of persons be found competent to act as jurymen or to furnish intelligent election officers." Our sole revenue from Alaska is 317,000 dollars, paid by a company for the exclusive privilege of taking seals along the coast and among the islands, and about 200 dollars taken in by the collector of Customs and his deputies. The expenses of the Government in Alaska are now about 55,000 dollars per year. So that in reality the receipts from Alaska are 200 dollars, against an expense account of 55,000 dollars.—New York Times.

The Daily News reports that the members of the Council of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers and a few of their friends met recently at Willesden Junction, to see a patent tramway engine which is the subject of one of the papers to be read at the meeting of the institution, by Mr. B. C. Browne, of Hawthorn Works, Newcastle-on-Tyne. The locomotive is the invention of Mr. Charles Brown, who has had the satisfaction of finding his engine adopted on the tramway systems of Strasburg, Hamburg, and other Continental towns. The one on view at Willesden has been in successful use in Newcastle-on-Tyne, where Messrs. R. and W. Hawthorn are busy constructing others. It is a tiny engine of remarkably neat construction, and weighing only 6 tons. The boiler, which is vertical, works at a pressure of 220 lb. to the square inch. Driving and stoking are under the easy control of one man. The cylinders, 5½ inches in diameter by 1¼ inches in stroke are raised above the foot-plate, and the motion is transmitted to the wheels by means of a rocking-beam. The wheels are only two feet in diameter, and these are kept out of view by a curtain board. The engine is roofed over, and above the roof a layer of copper tubes act as a condenser. There is no steam or smoke shown, and the engine runs with strikingly little noise. At Newcastle the running is performed on an incline of one in 20. The little engine was somewhat severely tested, as her wheels were too small for secure grip on the rails of the London and North Western permanent way; and in passing over the double rails at the crossings she had the misfortune to take the ground between the rails, thus falling, as it were, between the two stools. The gang of workers in the vicinity of the engine shed found little difficulty in replacing on the rails the wheels of an engine so much smaller than those with which they have at other times to deal, and at last on a stretch of line free from all such pitfalls, the little locomotive ran freely and apparently to the satisfaction of the critical onlookers.

POLICE.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

Yesterday, the Police Magistrate was assisted on the Criminal side by Messrs. Thomas, Skarratt, and Gray; and on the Summons side by Messrs. Neale, Withers, Ridge, and Hogan.

In the Summons Court seven convictions were had under the Publicans' Act, and penalties imposed varying from 2s. 6d. to 10s.; three defendants were fined 10s. each for using objectionable language; and six persons were fined in small sums for offences against the Police Act.

Margaret Scully was convicted of being an habitual drunkard, and was sentenced to be imprisoned with hard labour three months.

William George, charged with being an idle and disorderly person, without lawful means of support, was sentenced to three months' imprisonment.

John Windsor was charged with stealing in a dwelling. Detective Williams apprehended the prisoner on Wednesday, by description, and took him to Cohen's pawn shop, Oxford-street, where he was identified as the person who, on Thursday last week, pawned a gold ring, set with a ruby and four diamonds, which ring he now produced in Court. Ellen Mary Eagar residing in Hereford-street, Glebe, deposed that about 1 o'clock on Thursday last week she left home, and when, between 4 and 5 in the afternoon, she returned she found that a back window, the bolt of which had been fastened with cord, had been broken open, and the house had been entered; she found the things in the front room disarranged, and missed a dressing-case, in which she had two gold watches, one silver watch, two gold guards, one silver guard gold-plated, and a quantity of other jewellery, consisting of earrings, drops, rings, lockets, brooches, and bracelets; one ring, that produced by detective Williams, is one of the rings stolen on that occasion, and her property, and cost her £5 5s. in London; the watches are the property of her brother; in the case also were two wills, a memorandum book, and a number of loose papers; when she reported the robbery to the police she placed the value of the property at £30, but twice that amount would not replace the stolen articles. Isaac Cohen, assistant to Samuel H. Cohen, of Oxford-street, pawnbroker, deposed that the ruby and diamond ring in Court was pledged to him on the afternoon of Thursday last week by, he believed, the prisoner, and which, on the following day, in consequence of information he received, he handed to the police. By prisoner: He had no doubt that prisoner is the person who pawned the ring. Prisoner set up an alibi defence, and called three or four witnesses in support thereof. Committed for trial at the Quarter Sessions.

A licensing session was held, at which four publicans' licenses were transferred:—William W. Knowles to Daniel M'Grath; Sidney H. Roberts to Hugh M'Innes; John S. Beveridge to Thomas Vaughan; and George Anderson to John W. Cromie. A pawnbroker's license was granted to Isaac Himmelhoch.

WATER POLICE COURT.

Yesterday, Mr. Marsh, P.M., was assisted on the bench in the Charge Court by Messrs. Goodridge, Hunt, Fowler, and Arguimbau.

Four Chinamen, named respectively Ah Bing, Ah Foo, Ah See, and Ah Yow, were proceeded against at the instance of John Francis M'Donald, Custom-house officer, for smuggling a quantity of tobacco and cigars from the steamship Crusader, which arrived from Hongkong on Sunday last with a large number of Chinamen on board. The prisoners were detected by the Custom-house officer, and when searched at the police station a number of cigars, besides a quantity of tobacco, were found concealed about their persons. The prisoners one and all pleaded guilty, and in each case they were fined three times the value of the contraband. Ah See, upon whom the largest quantity was found, was fined £4 10s. with costs, or in default one month in gaol; Ah Yow was fined £3 6s. and costs, or one month in gaol; while the other two were fined £1 each with costs, or seven days in gaol.

William Clark, 19 years of age, charged with stealing a gold brooch valued at £2, the property of Herman Fiebh, was fined in the sum of 20s., with the alternative of 14 days in gaol.

Kate Garritty, who was arrested last night for using indecent language in Elizabeth-street, was ordered to go to gaol for three months, in default of paying a fine of £5.

Mary Johnson was fined £5, or three months in gaol, for using obscene language in Oxford-street.

Benjamin Langley, a seaman belonging to the ship Kosciusko, was brought up for wilful disobedience, and also for assaulting William Bothwell, the mate of the vessel. The prisoner, it appeared, went on board on Thursday afternoon in a state of drunkenness, and besides refusing to obey orders he struck the mate. The prisoner, who was arrested on warrant by constable Skinner, pleaded guilty, and for the assault he was sent to gaol for four weeks, with hard labour, while for wilful disobedience he received an additional sentence of two weeks in gaol.

LICENSING BUSINESS.—Before Messrs. Fowler and Sladen. James Standford Deane applied to have the license of the Lord Loftus Club Hotel, Castlereagh-street, transferred to Ellen Lennox. No objection was lodged on behalf of the police, but Mr. Fowler said that whenever he was on the bench he made it a practice to refuse a license to any single woman; the transferee being a widow, he did not consider they were justified in granting the application. The Bench disagreed, and consequently no order was made. Mr. Lowe, on behalf of Lennox, applied to the Bench for a postponement of the case, which, however, was not granted. John Williams applied to have the license of the Star Hotel, in Crown-street, Woolloomooloo, granted to John Carter. The police reported that at the annual licensing meeting it was resolved to recommend the Colonial Treasurer not to renew the license of this hotel; but as the transferee was a respectable person no objection was offered to the transfer, and the application was granted. The application of Henry Tipper for the transfer of the license of the Royal Sovereign Hotel, Darlinghurst Road, to George Bellamy was granted, there being no police objection. A temporary extension of his license was granted to George Adams, of Tattersall's Hotel, for a pigeon match at Randwick.

NEWTOWN POLICE COURT.

Yesterday, Dr. Brookes and Messrs. Kettle, Bailey, Pemell, Holborow, and Wright occupied the bench.

B. de Lissa v. James Wilcox, for wilful damage to hotel doors, amounting to £2. Case dismissed.

Garton v. Fraser, for assault. The defendant pleaded guilty, and was fined.

The transfer of the Carlisle Castle Hotel, Kingston, from Theresa M'Cullough to Charles S. Fredericks was granted.

STEEDMAN'S SOOTHING POWDERS FOR CHILDREN CUTTING TEETH.
CAUTION TO PURCHASERS.
The value of this well-known Family Medicine has been largely tested in all parts of the world, and by all grades of society, for upwards of FIFTY YEARS. Its well-earned extensive sale has induced SPURIOUS IMITATIONS, some of which, in OUTWARD APPEARANCE, so closely resemble the original as to have deceived many purchasers. The proprietor, therefore, feels it due to the public to give a special caution against the use of such imitations.
Purchasers are therefore requested carefully to observe the four following distinctive characteristics, without which none are genuine:—
1. In every case the words JOHN STEEDMAN, Chemist, Walworth, Surry, are engraved on the Government stamp affixed to EACH PACKET.
2. Each SINGLE POWDER has directions for the dose, and the words "John Steedman, Chemist, Walworth, Surrey," printed thereon.
3. The name Steedman is always spelt with two EE's.
4. The manufacture is carried on solely at Walworth, Surrey.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne.—The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, December 31, 1864.
Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne "is prescribed by scores of orthodox practitioners. Of course it would not be thus singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"—Medical Times, January 12, 1866.
Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is the best and most certain remedy in coughs, colds, asthma, consumption, neuralgia, rheumatism, &c.

Boys' Suits.

Those who have in their families boys from 8 to 18 years old, know only too well what a charge it is upon slender means the cost of clothing them. Boys require stronger material in their clothing than men. We have always kept this fact in view when choosing material to make our Boys' Suits. Three suits may now be had for the usual price of two. As instances of prices, a cheap dark knickerbocker tweed suit, braided, may be purchased for 2s 11d; some of a superior kind, 5s 11d; boys' long trousers suits, at 11s 9d, cannot be equalled anywhere for 17s 9d. Six shillings saved on one boy's suit is a consideration. A large stock is kept at all our establishments. Inspection is invited.

TO-DAY will be a special SHOW DAY—Boys' and Youths' Clothing.

THE WERTHEIM "TRIUMPH."
HAND SEWING-MACHINES.
BEALE and COMPANY respectfully notify that full stocks have now been received, and all back orders will be immediately fulfilled.
These WONDERFUL MACHINES were suddenly and deservedly appreciated, to such an extent that the whole of our shipments were absorbed.
For some time we have been regretfully unable to supply the demand, but we now solicit the orders of former inquirers. Large supplies have been landed, and are now landing out of the steamships Orient, Aconcagua, and ships Iron Duke, British Monarch, Carpathian, and British Sceptre; also, nearly due, the steamship Cotopaxi and ship Thessalus.

THE WONDERFUL WERTHEIM SEWING-MACHINES, without hand-folding, tacking (or basting), without the use of soap or sperm, without any pulling or pushing of the work, will make very fine double seams or fells; will kilt to any width, braid, make their own braid, bind, cord, ruffle, gather, sew on ribbons and trimmings, tuck, hem to any width, make frills, quilt, hem, and bind on the bias; embroider curtains or antimacassars, and generally do all household and factory sewing. Any of these kinds of work will be shown at our offices. Machines for all trades can be supplied. They are simple to learn, light in running, strong, handsome, and durable. Any machine may be had upon trial, ENTIRELY FREE OF CHARGE. Instruction at YOUR OWN HOMES free. Every WERTHEIM Machine sold by us will be KEPT IN REPAIR and working order for TWO YEARS from date of purchase, altogether FREE OF COST. NO INTEREST, NO EXTRA CHARGE on list price for TIME PAYMENT.
Any machine delivered at your own house for trial and inspection, FREE OF CHARGE. Price lists and samples by post. Country agents supplied upon liberal terms. Catalogues and samples free by post. Machines of all makers repaired. BEALE and COMPANY, George-street, near Market-street.

TO THE LADIES OF NEW SOUTH WALES.—Do not be deceived by the farce of FIRST PRIZES, GRAND DIPLOMAS, &c., given to various SEWING MACHINES by a parcel of men who are not half such good judges as you are yourselves. Go and inspect them yourself, or, better still, see some other lady who has a Sewing Machine, but be sure and find one who has the WILLCOX and GIBBS' AUTOMATIC SILENT SEWING MACHINE. You will not find that a difficult matter, as there are thousands who have these real home blessings in town and country, and have proved them to be such by years of well-tried experience. After such disinterested advice you will not be misled by any advertising plausibility as to Exhibition prizes, &c. These Automatic Machines can be obtained at HANSON'S PADDOCK, NEWTOWN.

THE LONG-LOOKED-FOR SALE of this well-known property takes place, at the TEMPERANCE HALL, SYDNEY, on SATURDAY NEXT, 5th of June.
SALE COMMENCES AT 2.30 p.m.

THE POSITION of this estate is unique; there is nothing like it in the market to-day. It has extensive frontages to the Newtown Road (King-street, along which the line of tram is to pass), to Wilson-street, which is within one minute of the Macdonaldtown station; indeed, any portion of the property is within three minutes of that station. These two means of transit, together with the innumerable passenger vehicles, afford facilities of access to and from the city, leaving nothing in that direction to be desired; in fact, Newtown must be looked upon as portion of the city, and sooner or later must be included within the city boundary.

HANSON'S PADDOCK is well elevated; is about the highest land in the district; is the very block of land recommended by the late Mr. Clarke, the engineer, as a site for reservoir; and extensive and beautiful views of the city, Waverley, Randwick, Botany, and Botany Bay are obtainable from any portion of it.

THE KING-STREET Frontages on the greatest artery of traffic out of the city, and which will soon rival, then eclipse, Oxford-street, are grand business sites of good depths; and, as will be seen, the requirements of business have been studied—a twenty-feet wide lane running at the rear of each.

THE FRONTAGES to Wilson, Bucknell, and Watkin streets are nearly all first-class sites for residences, and each lot has the great advantage of having a fifteen feet wide lane at its rear. The past rapid progress of Newtown will be slow compared with its future—accelerated as this must be by the erection of the vast Government workshops on the Chisholm Estate, &c.

THE WATER MAINS are laid in Wilson-street.

THE TITLE is under the Real Property Act, more popularly known as Torrens' Act.

THE TERMS are easy. It is questionable if such terms for such property have ever been offered before. Only 10 per cent. deposit; balance may extend over a period of years, payable by instalments, the buyer having the option at any time of paying the balance of principal, with interest to the 30th June or 31st December, as the case may be, and obtaining his deeds.

LIBERAL ASSISTANCE granted to build, on easiest terms of re-payment.

RESPECTABLE SURROUNDINGS guaranteed; for, without interfering with the architectural tastes of buyers, certain building restrictions will be imposed, thus promoting the general good, preventing the erection of unsightly tenements, which deteriorate the value of neighbouring properties.

THE LAND has been marked off by Surveyor Binsted. Each allotment peg is numbered, the new streets and lanes shaped, so that identification of any allotment is easy with the aid of the plan, lithographs of which are obtainable at the Auctioneer's Office, Temperance Hall, Sydney.

J. W. WATKIN, Auctioneer.

LOTS 2 to 9 include THE ROYAL STANDARD HOTEL, fronting SUSSEX-STREET, and the vacant land lying between the MILL owned by Mr. Boylson, and the Grafton Wharf boundary, sub-divided as per plan.
TITLE, TORRENS' ACT.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on FRIDAY, 2nd JULY next, at 11 o'clock,
The above VALUABLE CITY PROPERTIES.
LOT 1. The GRAFTON WHARF, which, with its well-built stores and vast accommodation, covers an area of over 2½ acres of land, presents a frontage to the waters of Darling Harbour of about 420 feet in a straight line, along which extends a substantially-built wharf having five wide and long jetties running out, capable of and constantly accommodating nine large vessels or steamers. This portion of the property, or the right to collect wharfages thereat, is let, with one small store, to the Associated Wharfingers for the next 3½ years, at a rental of £3000 per annum net, payable quarterly. Two of the small stores are also let, at £50 per annum each; and the row of cottages on the high ground overlooking the wharf has a tenant at £72 per annum; making a total income from these fixed sources of £3172 per annum. In addition to the foregoing, the ample space for storage of timber or other imports not requiring cover, and the nine large stone, and one iron, stores, capable of holding 9000 to 10,000 tons of measurement goods, yield a handsome yearly return, bringing up the total income to a sum of between £4500 and £5000, according to circumstances and the trade of the port.
Following the above property will be sold the land and premises adjoining the Grafton Wharf, and fronting Sussex and Napoleon streets, subdivided as follows, viz.:—
LOT 2. 30 feet 6 inches to SUSSEX-STREET, by a depth of 80 feet, adjoining Boylson's Mills.
LOT 3. 25 feet to SUSSEX-STREET, by a depth of 58 feet 9 inches, adjoining the above.
LOT 4. 30 feet to NAPOLEON-STREET by a depth of 30 feet, extending to and adjoining the back lines of lots 2 and 3.
LOT 5. CORNER block of land, at the intersection of NAPOLEON-STREET and the new street running to Sussex-street, having a frontage of 50 feet by 50 feet deep.
LOT 6. The ROYAL STANDARD HOTEL. This property has a frontage of 50 feet to SUSSEX-STREET, and is a substantial brick building, doing a large business, having the sole command of the trade of the Grafton Wharf, and the large properties adjoining. The land was originally let for building purposes for 21 years, and has now about 10 years to run, at £60 per annum.
LOTS 7 and 8 have each about 30 feet FRONTAGE to SUSSEX-STREET, by a depth averaging 104 feet to Napoleon-street, to which they have also frontages. Lot 7 has also a long frontage to the new street, extending from Sussex to Napoleon streets.
LOT 9, situated on the high land adjoining the stables of Boylson's Mill, and approached by a lane from Kent-street, has a frontage of 235 feet 9 inches to Napoleon-street, by a depth of over 50 feet, and will be sold for a lump sum.
☞ Too much attention cannot be drawn to the sale of the above important property, which is now in the market for absolute sale, in consequence of the necessity for settling up the partnership affairs with the Executors of the late J. H. Challis, Esq., as well as to carry out the desire of the surviving partner to bring his business operations into a narrower compass, and capitalists are specially asked to bear in mind that there is ONLY ONE GRAFTON WHARF, and that such an opportunity for acquiring so valuable a property is hardly likely to occur again.
Plan on view at the Rooms.
Terms very liberal.

FRIDAY, 18th JUNE, 1880.

POSITIVE and ABSOLUTE SALE of
GRAND SQUATTING PROPERTY,
GLENARIFF STATION,
Warrego District, of New South Wales.

WILKINSON, GRAVES, MINCHIN, and LAVENDER (in conjunction with Griffiths and Weaver, of Sydney, and R. Goldsbrough and Co., of Melbourne), have received instructions from A. G. Jones, Esq., to sell by public auction, at Messrs. R. Goldsbrough and Co.'s Wool Warehouse, Melbourne, on FRIDAY, 18th June next, at 2.30 p.m. sharp,
His very extensive and elaborately improved station
GLENARIFF,
comprising the runs Glenariff D, E, F, G, and H, which contain 320,000 acres of first-class wool-growing and fattening country, admitted to be at least equal in quality to any in the far-famed Riverina district.
The capabilities are estimated at fully 100,000 SHEEP,
and the FENCING and WATER IMPROVEMENTS already completed afford ample paddock accommodation for a much larger number of stock than the number offered, viz., 55,744 FIRST-CLASS MERINO SHEEP, of BAYLY, COX, and LEARMONTH BLOOD, of which 30,000 are lambing ewes, including 1000 stud flock.
A quiet dairy herd of highly bred cattle.
32 working horses.
Together with a complete station plant.
There is a LARGE HOMESTEAD with LARGE WOOLSHED, and all other necessary improvements.

THE AUCTIONEERS specially draw the attention of capitalists to this really grand squatting property, which, taking into consideration the character and extent of the country, the lightness of the present stocking, that the sheep are of a high type, that there will be an immediate increase from 30,000 ewes, and that the property is for positive sale, should command attention.
Inspection, for which every facility will be given, is invited.
For letters to inspect, apply to WILKINSON, GRAVES, MINCHIN, and LAVENDER; or, GRIFFITHS and WEAVER, Sydney. or,
R. GOLDSBROUGH and CO., Melbourne.

N.B.—The whole of this magnificent tract of country is now nearly enclosed, and will be entirely so without cost to the purchaser (guaranteed).

VALUABLE AND EXTENSIVE SQUATTING PROPERTY
In New South Wales.

RICHARD GIBSON and CO. have received instructions from Robert Scott, Esq., to sell by public auction, in MELBOURNE, on MONDAY, 14th JUNE next, at Menzies' Hotel, at half-past 2 o'clock,
The MULTAGOONA STATION,
situate on the Warrego River,
70 miles north of Bourke,
comprising an area of 170,000 acres of Crown lands, together with 35,000 Sheep.
This Station consists of seven blocks of country, being the southern portion of that well-known property Belalie. It is all splendid sheep country, permanently watered by the Warrego River and Irrara Creek, to which streams it has a double frontage. The boundaries are all, with the exception of a small piece, fenced with six wires, and the run is subdivided into five paddocks by five-wire fencing. The homestead, drafting yards, &c., are complete, and the free use of the Belalie woolshed for the year can be had after shearing is completed there. The sheep are a fair run of the station flocks, which were originally formed from the most noted Riverina breeders, and will be found a very superior lot. Altogether this is a most desirable property, and well worthy the attention of investors, as the opportunity of obtaining such sheep country, free from selection, seldom occurs.
Full particulars can be obtained on application to the Agents, 66, Queen-street, Melbourne; or
